PREFACE

A Bibliography of 1509 sources compiled by me in 1984 in conjunction with Dr. Nafees Ahmad Siddiqui has long back become outdated as it could not be published in the eighties of the Twentieth Century by U.P. Itihas Akadami, for whom it was written. It has now thoroughly been re-written, re-arranged and updated till February, 2003 to make it an altogether a different work. It is now presented here as 'Sources on Awadh'. Although the last serial number in it is 2334 but since many works have been cited as b+c+d etc. also along with the main title as (a) of a particular serial number and such sources are 142 in number, the total sources thus covered now should have been 2476. However, the works cited at Sl. Nos. 426 & 475, 533 & M99 and 534 & 1148 are the same. So after subtracting 3 from 2476, the total number of the listed sources comes out to be 2473. Out of these, $1175 + 140 = 1315$ are primary sources and $1156 + 2 = 1158$ are secondary. For a better grip on the sources listed here, it is worthwhile to deem 1441, 2030 and 2084 and 1735 and 1901 to have been clustered together. Similarly, the following sources may better be read as listed below :

having a bird's eye-view of the History of Awadh in a nutshell. My book entitled "The Mughals, the English, and the Rulers of Awadh : A Kaleidoscopic Study" will serve as a good companion volume to this book.

A part of my studies leading to the writing of 92 research papers and the books published by me so far was carried out at my home town Bijnor at the residence of my in-laws. I shall, therefore, like to put on record my great sense of gratitude to my father-in-law, Haji Aminuddin and my mother-in-law, Musammat Bilqis Jahan for their loving care and elderly encouragement during the execution of my research works in the eighties of the Twentieth Century. Rest of the acknowledgements remain to be the same as I have given in my book on Wazir Ali. In addition, I am highly grateful to Mr. Imran Mirza and Mr. M.F. Beg, Partners, New Royal Book Company, Lalbagh, Lucknow, for publishing this book with great care and attention.

I had handed over the final draft of this book to my publishers in the second week of December, 2002 and now its press copy is also well ready for publication so I did not deem it proper to disturb its main sequence and contents and am listing below additional sources, which I have tapped in the meantime. These are to be read below the serial number given here.

- 815A. Usool-ul-Maqsood of Shah Turab Ali Qalandar (Lucknow, 1894).
Written in 1810. It is a very important contemporary source written by a leading saint of Kakori of his times. It throws a lot of light on the contemporary events and also on the confinement of Shah Qazim Qalandar of Kakori by Raja Jhau Lal, which I have written based on the Calendar of the Persian Correspondence in my book entitled "The Mughals, the English & the Rulers of Awadh : A Kaleidoscopic Study" (Lucknow, 2003).

- 1978A. Armughan-i-Awadh of Molvi M. Irtiza Ali Ulvi (Etawah, 1892).
- 2061A. Kawakib of Masood Anwar Ulvi (Lucknow, 1987).
- 2128A. Nafhat-un-Nasim fi Tahqiq Ahwal Awlad Abdul Karim of Molvi Sami Ali Ulvi & revised and enlarged by Munshi Amir Ahmad Ulvi (Lucknow, 1934).

The list of the sources presented here still has a scope of further expansion as new books are constantly being written and even new sources are frequently coming to the light. In fact, I have come across a very rare new Manuscript, which I am reading now a days and shall introduce it in my next book with critical appreciation. It contains very authentic but rare material on the Nawabs and Kings of Awadh, which is not available in the well known sources.

SOURCES ON AWADH

A proper and authentic knowledge of source for any research work is indispensable. The present work deals with the sources shedding light on the Nawabs and Kings of Awadh and their times from 1722 to 1856. Fortunately enough, there is no dearth of primary sources for this period. These are not only voluminous but also in many languages. It makes the task of a scholar onerous. He ought to be a perfect linguist for properly and accurately reading, deciphering, understanding and interpreting these sources. It is also necessary because the copyists of the manuscripts are often found careless and the published texts have been generated in a very slipshod manner. A major portion of the available material is in English, followed by that in Persian, Urdu and Marathi. Sources in French, German, Hindi, Nepali, Arabic and Turkish are only a few. The number of the latter is so slender that these can be counted on fingers' tips. German and Turkish sources are available in a fully translated form but only a part of those in French, Marathi and Nepali have been translated into English. There is a crying need to render all of them into English. All these primary sources, numbering 1315, have been listed here. In addition, 1158 secondary sources in Arabic, Bengali, English French, Hindi, Marathi, Persian and Urdu have been enumerated. If we add 1 primary and 18 secondary sources listed in the Preface to these figures, the total number of the primary and secondary sources covered by this book comes out to be 1316 and 1176 respectively. Thus, now this book covers in all 2492 sources on Awadh for the period 1722-1856.

As pointed out above, a major chunk of the contemporary material is in English. It is replete with copious details and accurate dates. Almost all of it was written by the actual participants of the events as early as possible. They rendered it in a majority of cases either immediately after a particular event or within 2-3 days of it having taken place. Its utility as the most authentic account of the events is, therefore, crystal clear. However, some of the estimations and opinions contained in such epistles and scrolls can not be accepted at their face value. The facts have deliberately been twisted or misrepresented in certain cases; particularly in the official British records, to justify the British policies in Awadh. Such eventualities can be obviated either by giving due weightage to the circumstantial evidence these contain or by comparing and contrasting these from within, when corresponding material in other sources is missing, or by sifting these with the material in other languages. A majority of selections made from such papers are available in an extracted form to highlight the achievements and contributions of some prominent Englishmen in India. These should be dealt with very cautiously as their sole aim is to justify the actions and policies of such personalities. However, on scanning all such papers in full and reading these with other and corresponding papers and material somewhat different picture emerges. It is, therefore, indispensable that no concrete judgement should be formed in respect of a particular event merely after a perusal of such selections. The British official papers have also preserved either in a copied or in a translated form, a substantial portion of the official documents of the Nawabs and Kings of Awadh. Such reproductions always help in grasping the other side of the picture.

Sources in other languages and having the above mentioned attributes, like the collections of the contemporary letters, Dastur-ul-Amals and diaries are not as voluminous, graphic and comprehensive. However, whatever we have is an invaluable asset in producing dispassionate and accurate History of the period.

The Persian and Urdu Chronicles of the period are mostly hopeless. These are neither exhaustive in details and rich in accurate dates nor the accounts of the eye-witnesses of the events in most cases. Some of them were definitely eye-witnesses of the events which they have recorded but they did not pen down their accounts immediately after its occurrence and did so many years later on the basis of their memories. Despite these lacunas, such accounts corroborate and substantiate the events of the above mentioned sources and, at places, add new facts not found elsewhere. However, some of these writers suffer with a great enigma. They wrote their Histories at the command of the Britishers or under the patronage of the Nawabs and Kings of Awadh and their nobles. All such writers not only indulge in exaggerations and coin gossips but are also hostile to certain personages of Awadh. Great caution should be exercised while handling such sources. Writers in Persian and Urdu also blindly copy each other. It is, therefore, no wonder that a study of almost all such sources is rewarded but with a very annoying monotony of the same material. Since talents differ and some of the expressions and idioms and phrases of different languages defy accurate translation in other languages, the translations of the sources listed here, with very few exceptions, are filled with a number of inaccuracies. It is, therefore, advisable that such translations should not be used without comparing these with their originals. Some Englishmen did this job with ulterior motives and have indulged either in leaving some important facts untranslated or have interpolated here and there. However, it does not mean that all such translations are to be summarily rejected because bulk of these have faithfully been rendered.

Out of the later and modern works, those which have not properly blended the English sources with the indigenous sources or are based on inadequate material are filled with grave inaccuracies. The works based exclusively on sources in English or in other languages are of no independent value unless and until the narratives contained therein are based on accurate and authentic sources or are dealing with the factual data. The works quoting no authority at all are not better than fiction. Old works of Persian and Urdu were never undertaken with a scientific approach but reproduce important documents, details and inscriptions of monuments and biographical sketches of the people of their regions or families based on their own personal knowledge or sources not yet traceable. Out of the modern writers in these languages, mostly are apologetic in their approach, want to portray only the bright side of the picture and try to find justification for each and every failing of the Nawabs and Kings of Awadh to the British interference in Awadh, which, though true, is overemphasized. Works on different poets often fail to tap the well known contemporary historical sources or the modern works. All such attempts, therefore, are found wanting in respect of accurate dates and details of the events.

The text has not been burdened with phonetic signs and symbols. The titles and names have, therefore, been written as these are generally spelt.

I am including a translation of a very small booklet of Urdu entitled "Allama Sitapuri" of Na-dim Sitapuri at the end of the book. It throws light on the contribution of the Fort William College, Calcutta, to Urdu literature in a nut shell and is a rare work not easily available. It is listed at serial number 1972 of this book.

Bishewhwar Prashad: The British Government and the Kingdom of Oudh, 1764-1835 (Allahabad, 1944). Capt. Paton describes the events for the period 1764-1798 on the basis of J. Mill's History of India, from which he reproduces long extracts. He writes from his own personal knowledge for the period 1798-1836. He was better placed to know the facts which he describes as he was Assistant to the Residents posted at the Court of Awadh.

129. Modave's Journal du Voyage (Copy of a Paris MS). It has very useful details about Shuja-ud-daulah based on his own personal observations made during the course of his journey from Chandranagore to Delhi via Faizabad and Lucknow. It is also useful for his remarks on the socio-econo-mo-religious conditions of Awadh.

D. Persian

130. Ahwal-i-Najib-ud-daulah Amir-ul-Umara Sabit Jang (Salar Jang) of Bihari Lal. Written in 1787. The author was the nephew of the Confidential Agent of Najib-ud-daulah. He has rendered an authentic account of Najib-ud-daulah and his son Zabita Khan and their relations with the Nawabs of Awadh.

131. Ahwal-i-Salatin-i-Mutakhirin (OPL) : Anon. It covers the period from the death of Aurangzeb to the 30th Regnal Year of Shah

- Alam-II. It has mainly been copied from other sources and from the invasion of Nadir Shah till the year of its completion, it is merely a reproduction of Mirat-i-Aftab Numa (See Infra).
132. Ahwal-i-Zindagi-i-Faizbakhsh or Chashma-i-Faiz (ASB, Kutub Khana Anwarya, Kakori) of Munshi Faiz Bakhsh. It was originally written in 1815 but the author continued to add in it till 1231 H (1816). It is a connected account of his ancestors and other contemporaries and gives very important facts about the Nawabs and nobles of Awadh.
 133. Ajaib-ul-Afaq (Raza, Br. Museum Or. 1776). It contains letters of Chhabele Ram, Girdhar Bahadur and the Sayyid Brothers. The Raza Library MS has also some Akhbarats relating to Chhabele Ram and Girdhar Bahadur.
 134. Akhbar (Persian MSS QR 4608-09, Br. Library, London).
 135. Akhbar Deorhi of Prince Jahandar Shah, 1199 H (CRO). It is an important fragment of the daily court bulletins of Prince Jahandar Shah, who came to Awadh during the Nawabi of Asaf-ud-daulah, of 1199 H (1784-5).
 136. Akhbar-i-Deorhi Mohammad Ali Shah (Tagore) for 1839.
 137. Akhbarat-i-Kotwali-i-Lakhnau (Bodleian Library, Oxford) Add Per. MSS 2356.
 138. Akhbar-i-Nadir Shah (RI). Anon. No date. A short biography of Nadir Shah since his birth to death, including his invasion on India. It is very rich in dates. It also throws some useful light on Ahmad Shah Durrani.
 139. Akhbarat-i-Nawab Asaf-ud-daulah (CRO)
 140. Akhbar-i-Saa'dat Ali Khan (Persian MSS 10 4341-42, Commonwealth Relations Office, London) 1810, 1811, 1827 (Add. 24,038; British Library).
 141. Alam-i-Ashob (LMB) of Khairuddin Muhammad. It deals chiefly with the life and times of Shah Alam-II but adds nothing more than what the author has given in Ibratnama.
 142. (a+b) Amir Nama (a.RI) of Busawan Lal Shadan. b. Eng.tr.as 'Memoirs of the Pathan soldier of Fortune, the Nawab Ameerood-daulah Muhammad Ameer Khan (Calcutta, 1832). Written in 1814-15. It is a biography of the famous Afghan adventurer Amir Khan and has occasional references on Awadh of no independent value.

143. Anwar-ul-Quloob (Dar-ul-uloom, Deoband) of Muhammad Haji Mun'im Bakht Qadri son of Shah Alam-II. It is a connected account of the Mughals down to Shah Alam-II.
144. Asarul Mehshar (Raza) of Syed Muhammad Raza Najm. Written after mutiny. It contains an account of the deposition of Wajid Ali Shah, his replies to the Blue Book and an account of the mutiny. Has occasional references on previous Nawabs and Kings also. His approach is partisan.
145. Asar-i-Wajidi (Tagore) of Zahiruddin Bilgrami. Written in 1863.
146. Ausaf-ul-Asaf (AMU, State Museum Lucknow) of Munshi Inamullah Raghib. Written in 1199 H (1784-85); but the author added some portions in it in 1200 H (1785-86). However, the copy of Elliot (Elliot & Dowson, VIII, 300) even goes down to 1795. The author served under Safdar Jang for 10 years and under Muhammad Quli Khan, Governor of Allahabad, for 12 years. Thereafter, he passed a retired life at his house in village Bijnor, near Lucknow, where he wrote the work in question. Since it has not been written under the patronage of anybody and since the author was closely associated with the events of Awadh, it is dispassionate and reliable. Its dates are mostly accurate; but the date of birth of Wazir Ali given by him is in fact the date of his second birth anniversary. He has described the buildings of Asaf-ud-daulah in some details; but the description is hyperbolic.
147. Ayenah-i-Huq Numa of Molana Syed Dildar Ali (Nasiriya MS) (Nasiriya Library, Lucknow).
148. Azizul Quloob (Qaimganj, AMU). It is a collection of letters written by Muhammad Khan Bangash to the Mughal Emperor and other nobles of his time. These were compiled in a book form by Bhagwan Das, Mir Munshi of Muhammad Khan Bangash, and are invaluable for the History of Awadh also. Having consulted Najmul Ghani's works, which contain in full some of these letters, it is rather surprising that Dr. A.L. Srivastava did not make any use of these in dealing with the relations of Safdar Jang with Ali Muhammad Khan Rohilla and the Bangash Pathans of Farrukhabad.
149. Bahar-i-Khayal (Raza). It is a collection of some contemporary letters.

150. Bahr-ul-Mawwaj (OPL) of Muhammad Ali Khan Ansari. It is a bigger version of Tarikh-i-Muzaffari (See Infra).
151. (a+b). Bayan-i-Waqai (a) Salar Jang, also called Tarikh-i-Nadir Shah or Tarikh-i-Durrani (RI) of Khwaja Abdul Karim Khan Kashmiri. (b) Eng. tr. Francis Gladwain as 'Momoirs of Khojeh Abdulkurreem (Calcutta, 1788). The author was an accomplished scholar and an acute and discerning observer of the things and events. He also travelled to Arabia, Persia, Afghanistan and wide tracts of northern India including Awadh, Rohilkhand and Punjab, the imprints of which can be traced in his observations about these places in his work. Besides a detailed sketch on Nadir Shah, the central theme of his work is the History of the Mughals down to 1793 but Awadh, Rohilkhand and Punjab also get a substantial treatment from his vivid, accurate and discerning pen.
152. Bisatin Ghanaim (RI) of Lachhmi Narian Shafiq. He was in the employment of the Nizams of Hyderabad and was a poet and a prolific writer. The present work is a History of the Marathas down to 1214 H (1799-1800), which has mostly been copied from some anonymous histories of the Marathas. For our purpose, it is useful only for such activities of the Marathas in northern India which had a bearing on Awadh.
153. Burhan-i-Awadh (AMU) of Syed Ibn Hasan. It is on Saadat Khan and has not yet been seen by me.
154. Chahar Chaman (RI) of Chandra Bhan Brahman. Completed on 28th December, 1731. It contains a description of various Provinces of India, including Awadh.
155. Chahar Gulzar-i-Shujai (Khalsa College, Amritsar, AMU Rotograph) of Haricharan Das. Completed on 1st Ramzan, 1198 H (20th June, 1784). The author was an employee of Nawab Qasim Ali Khan, a relative of Ishaq Khan Najmuddaulah at Delhi till the 2nd Regnal Year of Alamgir-II, when he migrated to Awadh, remained in the employment of Khanam Sahiba, daughter of his previous employer, at Faizabad and was granted a subsistence allowance by Shuja-ud-daulah. It is a detailed History of the Nawabs of Awadh till the year of its completion but its dates are mostly wrong and its author is surcharged with a partisan spirit. It is more useful for the Nawabi of Shuja-ud-daulah and Asaf-ud-daulah, about whom he gives more correct and interesting details.

156. Dasturul Amal (CRO) of Mehdi Ali Khan. It is a very important source for the revenue administration.
157. Dasturul Amal-i-Awadh (Raza). It contains very important contemporary papers related to the Kings of Awadh; but also has some important dates pertaining to the Nawabs of Awadh.
158. Dasturul Insha (OPL) of Munshi Yar Muhammad Qalandar. It is invaluable for Saadat Khan.
159. Durr-i-Manzoom also called Jangnama-i-Dojora (Saulat) of Ghulam Jilani Rifat. Written in 1213 H (1798-99). It is quite a reliable contemporary account of the battle of Dojora, fought between the forces of Asaf-ud-daulah and the English and Ghulam Muhammad Khan of Rampur. It also contains a short versified sketch on Wazir Ali, which is evidently a composition of some later date. It is too brief and sketchy and not of much value.
160. Fawaid-i-Asafiyah wa Mawaiz-i-Hasniyah (Nasiriya MS) of Syed Dildar Ali.
161. Fragment of a Collection of Reports by a Lakhnau Amil (Persian MSS 10 4530-31, Commonwealth Relations Office, London).
162. (a+b) Gul-i-Rehmat (a. Raza) of Nawab Saadat Yar Khan. (b) Urdu tr. Mustafa Hussain Nizami (Lucknow, 1986). Written in 1249 H (1833-34). It is based merely on Gulistan-i-Rehmat.
163. (a+b). Gulistan-i-Rehmat (a) Raza of Nawab Muhammad Mustajab Khan. (b) Eng. tr. Charles Elliott (London, 1831). It is the biography of the author's father, Nawab Hafiz Rehmat Khan of Rampur. It is partial to the Afghans and is not free from misstatements and half truths. Despite these lacunas, it is the chief source for the History of the Rohillas and the Bangash Nawabs of Farrukhabad from the days of Daud down to 1775 and deals with the affairs of Awadh also.
164. Gulshan-i-Bahar (NL) of Ganga Bishan Bhatnagar. Written in 1199 H (1784-85). It contains contemporary letters throwing light on the relations of Safdar Jang with Ali Muhammad Khan Rohilla and Jeta Gujar.

165. Gulshan-i-Hind (CRO) of Abdul Karim. Written in 1262 H (1845-46). It is a general History of India and is based on other works.
166. (a+b) Hadiqat-ul-Alam (a. Salar Jang) of Mir Alam. (b) Persian Text, Hyderabad, n.y.) Written in 1799. A reliable account on the Nizams of Hyderabad and their relations with the Nawabs of Awadh. It also writes about the activities of Imad-ul-mulk.
167. Hadiqat-ul-Aqalim (Tagore, CRO) of Mirza Murtqza Hussain Bilgrami alias Shaikh Illah Yar Usmani. Written between 1780 and 1781. The author was in the employment of Saadat Khan, Safdar Jang, Ahmad Khan Bangash and other nobles of Awadh prior to 1776. He writes from his personal knowledge, which makes his account authentic and reliable. His minute observations and details about his employers and other contemporaries, missing in other works, render his account very invaluable.
168. Hayat-i-Khusnaveesan (Salar Jang) of Husain. Written in 1860. It contains biographical notes on eminent calligraphists in a versified form and is very useful.
169. Hidayat-ul-Qawaid of Hidayatullah Bihari (AMU). It has some useful references on later Mughals.
170. Hikayat-i-Fateh Nadir Shah (ASB). Anon. Appears to have been written immediately after the invasion of Nadir Shah around which its theme rotates and seems to be a refutation of Jauhar-i-Samsam (See Infra). Not free from inaccuracies but is useful for the role of Saadat Khan on the eve of Nadir Shah's invasion.
171. (a+b). Hussain Shahi or Tarikh-i-Ahmad Shah Durrani (a. ASB) of Imad-ul-din Hussaini. (b) Urdu tr. entitled 'Daulat-i-Durraniya' (Delhi, 1321 H). Written in 1798. The author collected details about Ahmad Shah Durrani during the course of his journey to Afghanistan by making personal enquiries from the local people and wrote those in the present work. He has not sifted his information meticulously and his work is filled with grave inaccuracies.
172. Ibrat Maqal (OPL) of Muhammad Qasim Lahori. It is another version of the author's work Ibratnama (See below) till the 3rd Regnal Year of Muhammad Shah.
173. Ibratnama (OPL) of Muhammad Qasim Lahori. A reliable work for the period 1707-1743 by a contemporary, who was an eyewitness of the events he describes. It throws light on the careers of Saadat Khan and Safdar Jang.

174. Ibratnama (Raza, ASB, NAI) of Khairuddin Muhammad. Written in 1806. It gives mere summary accounts about Shah Alam-I, Muhammad Shah and Ahmad Shah but is very detailed about Shah Alam-II. Its treatment of the Nawabs of Awadh till the year of its completion is original and mostly accurate.
175. Ibrat-ul-Alam (OPL) of Syed Abbad Ali Khan Bilgrami. Written in 1287 H. It is a family History of the author based on the original papers and documents in his possession.
176. (a+b) I'jaz-i-Arsalani (a. Bibliotheque Nationale Paris MS Blochet 713-4). A collection of the letters of A.L.H. Polier for the period 1187-93 H (1773-9). (b) Eng. tr. Muzaffar Alam & Seema Alavi as 'A European Experience of the Mughal Orient : The I'jaz-i-Arsalani (Persian letters, 1773-1779) of Antoine-Louis Henri Polier (New Delhi, 2001).
177. (a+b) Imad-us-Saadat (a. Easily available everywhere of Ghulam Ali Naqvi. (b) Persian Text, Newal Kishore Press, 1897). Written in 1808. It is a detailed and connected work on the Nawabs of Awadh till the year of its completion. However, it is the most hopeless Persian work. To make the confusion more confounded, it has unfortunately been most extensively and blindly copied by the successive chroniclers. Its author was hostile to the Afghans, had a soft corner for the Nawabs of Awadh and wrote his work at the command of the English, on whose bounty he depended and to displease whom he could never afford. His this three-dimensional bias necessarily drove him to have recourse in exaggerations and pure gossips. It is, therefore, no wonder that a perusal of his work, in the light of more reliable contemporary sources, reveals that a major portion of it is not History but fiction. Despite these lacunas, it is an important primary source for the Nawabs of Awadh and its biographical sketches of the nobles of Awadh are very valuable. The Persian text often needs corrections from an authentic and accurate Manuscript.
178. (a+b). Insha-i-Faiz Bakhsh (Amir) of Munshi Faiz Bakhsh. Written in 1205 H (1790-91). It is a collection of contemporary letters; mostly drafted by Munshi Lachchhmi Narian, on behalf of his employers in Awadh. Its printed version (b) Ruqa'at-i-Lachchmi Narian (Lucknow, 1882) does not tally with the manuscript at various places and contains additional matter, which is missing in the manuscript and vice-versa. It is a first rate source on the History of Shuja-ud-daulah, Asaf-ud-daulah, Bahu Begam, Muhabbat Khan, Ghulam Qadir Khan and the nobles of Awadh.

179. (a+b) Insha-i-Roshan Kalam (a) Tagore) of Bhupat Rai. (b) Persian Text, Nizami Press, Kanpur. The compiler was Munshi of Nawab Rad-Andaz Khan, Faujdar of Baiswara in Awadh in the early years of the Eighteenth Century. These letters throw light on the law and order situation of Awadh prior to the appointment of Saadat Khan as its Subahdar.
180. Intikhab-i-Akhbarat (Persian MS Add 16721, British Library, London)
181. Intikhab Darbar-i-Muallah wa Mahaji Sindhia, Babtah 1201 H (Salar Jang). It is a collection of news-letters of the Imperial Court of Shah Alam-II from 21st Ramzan to 25th Zilhijj, 1201 H (7th to 8th December, 1787) and has useful references on Awadh.
182. Iqbalnamah, also called Tarikh-i-Wazir Ali Khan and Tarikh-i-Sir John Shore (AMU) : The pagination of this Manuscript is jumbled. The correct sequence is 1a-15b, 18a-20b, 16a-17b, 21a-31b, 34a-36b, 32a-33b, 37a-67b. Nothing is known about the author except that he calls himself a humble servant of Asaf-ud-daulah. His unfavourable remarks on Tipu Sultan and Wazir Ali and his praise of the English, Tafazzul Hussain and Tehsin Ali Khan and condemnation of Wazir Ali in the entire work as a whole tend to indicate that he composed it at the instigation of an Englishman. It gets further confirmation when it is found that he writes exactly what the Englishmen wanted to propagate about Wazir Ali. At Places, he mixes fancy with reality. For example, his description of Cherry's murder is more a product of his own mind rather than a reality. Despite these lacunas, it is an important, and, at places, quite reliable source. It deals with the life of Wazir Ali from his accession till end.
183. Iqbalnamah (Raza) Anon. It is an eye-witness account from the beginning of Farrukhsiyar's reign till the 25th Regnal Year of Muhammad Shah. It also contains an account of the Third Battle of Panipat appended at the end.

184. (a+b+c+d) Ishq Namah (a. Masud, Library of the Raja of Mahmoodabad) of Wajid Ali Shah. (b) In Urdu in versified form (Anjuman Taraqqi-i-Urdu Hind and the Library of the Raja of Mahmoodabad). Written in 1266 H (1849-50) - In it Wajid Ali Shah extends the description till 28th year of his life. (c) Urdu tr. Mirza Fida Ali Khanjar as 'Tarikh-i-Pari Khana' first published in 1914 (4 subsequent editions) (d) Urdu tr. Tehsin Sarwari as 'Parikhana' (Pakistani edition, n.y.; published twice). The Persian version was written in 1849. It is an autobiography of the King which contains a description of his love affairs from the age of 8 years till 26th year of his life.
185. Israr-i-Wajidi (Tagore) of Muhammad Zahiruddin Khan Bilgrami. Written in 1863.
186. Jam-i-Jahan Numa (Raza) of Molvi Qudratullah Siddiqi Shoq. Began in 1191 H (1777) and finished in 1199 H (1784-85); but the author made additions in it till as late as 1223 H (1808). He remained for quite a long time at Rampur, Anwla, Pilibhit, Badaun, Bissauli etc.; but he never went to Delhi or Lucknow. It is a work of no independent value and has chiefly been copied from the well known Persian works but adds some useful details about the places where he resided.
187. Jam-i-Jum (Raza) of Syed Ahmad Khan. Finished on 25th May, 1839 and gives merely the genealogical tables of the Mughal Emperors till the date of its completion.
188. (a+b) Jamey-ut-Tawarikh (a. Saulat) of Qazi Faqir Muhammad. (b) Persian Text, Newal Kishore Press, 1250 H, which has a Preface by Abdul Latif, son of the author. Written in 1250 H (1834-35). Its last chapter contains an account of India, including the rulers of Awadh and is totally based on Siyar-ul-Mutakhirin.
189. Jauhar-i-Samsam (ASB) of Muhammad Mohsin Bijnauri. Written in 1153 H (1740-41). Not free from inaccuracies but contains a brief account of Saadat Khan till his death, including his role on the eve of Nadir Shah's invasion, which he censures too critically.
190. Jinanul Firdaus (Raza) of Ahmad Mirza Muhammad Yusufi. Originally written in 1126 H (1714) and contained six chapters.

- Tajammul Hussain added seventh and eighth chapters in it in 1244 H (1828-29). It contains short biographical sketches of the Nawabs and Kings of Awadh; but is not always accurate.
191. Kaghzat-i-Pargana Laharpur, Sarkar Khairabad near Sitapur (Tagore).
 192. (a+b+c+d) Karzar-i-Sadashiv Rao Bhau wa Shah Ahmad Abdali of Kashiraj. (a. NL). b. Ed & tr Jadunath Sarkar as "Panipat : 1761", Indian Historical Quarterly, X, 1937.c. Eng. tr. H.G. Rawlinson as 'An Account of the Last Battle of Panipat and of the events leading to it (Oxford University Press, 1926). d. Urdu tr Yaqub Khan as 'Vaqiat-i-Jang Panipat' (Calcutta, 1925). Written in 1780. It is a well known authentic account of the Third Battle of Panipat.
 193. Kashkol (Saulat). Badly worm eaten. Beginning and end missing. It is an encyclopaedia of general information and has some important chronograms pertaining to Awadh and Rampur.
 194. (a+b). Kawaif-i-Zila Gorakhpur of Mufti Ghulam Hazrat. (a. AMU). b. Urdu tr. Ahmar Lari (Gorakhpur). Written in 1810 or before. It is a first rate source on the revenue administration in the Chaklah of Gorakhpur.
 195. Kharaba Delhi Ba Ahd-i-Muhammad Shah az warud Nadir Shah, Vali-i-Iran (RI). Another Manuscript of the same work is preserved here under the title. "Tarikh-i-Hamla-i-Nadiri." Anon. No date. Written at the request of one Mir Safdar Ali Khan and deals with the invasion of Nadir Shah on India, including the role of Saadat Khan in it. In view of the availability of more authentic sources on the subject, it is not of much help.
 196. Khujasta Kalam (I.O. MS at Sitamau) of Sahib Rai. It contains letters of Muhammad Khan Bangash.
 197. Khulasat-ul-Insab (Raza) of Hafiz Rehmat Khan. It was written by the famous Rohilla ruler of Rampur, who died heroically fighting in the battle of Miranpur Katra in 1774. It throws light on the genealogy of the Afghans and family details about the Rohilla rulers of Rampur.
 198. (a+b) Khulasat-ut-Tawarikh (a. OPL) of Kalyan Singh. b. Eng tr in JBORS. Written in 1812. It is based merely on Siyar-ul-Muta Khirin but is a first rate source for the role of his father in pre and post-Battle of Buxar period during the Nawabi of Shuja.

199. Khutut-i-Shah Alam (Raza, CRO). These are contemporary letters of Shah Alam-II.
200. Kitab-i-Malfoozat-i-Soofiya-i-Kiram wa Ash'ar-i-Nasayeh Shora-i-Aali Muqam (Qaimganj MS) of Saqi Dad Khan No date. The title itself explains the book. It has some letters of Mirza Jan-i-Jana Mazhar
201. Lauh-i-Tarikh (IOL MS 4243) of Munawwar Ali Khan on the Bangash Nawabs of Farrukhabad.
202. Lub-us-Siyar (Raza) of Abu Talib Londoni. Written in 1208 H (1793-94). It is a general History of the world including India and has chiefly been extracted from other sources.
203. Lub-ut-Tawarikh (Saulat) of Ghayas-ud-din Muhammad. Completed on 14th Shawwal, 1268 H (1st August, 1852). Extracted from other sources for the use of his son and purely of secondary importance.
204. Lucknow 1253 Hijri Main (RI) of Mendu Lal.
205. Maadan-us-Saadat (ASB) of Syed Sultan Ali Khan Safavi. Written between 1798 and 1802 and dedicated to Saadat Ali. Till 1780, it merely summarises or reproduces verbatim Siyar-ul-Mutakhirin but thereafter he writes from his own personal knowledge. He is a court flatterer. His account is, therefore, filled with great inaccuracies. However, he has given very useful details about the cultural contribution of the Nawabs of Awadh and their armies.
206. Maasir-i-Asafi (ASB, Osmania University). Written in 1793. This contemporary History of the Nizams of Hyderabad is a reliable and authentic source for their relations with the Nawabs of Awadh.
207. (a+b+c+d) Maasir-i-Talibi-fi-Bilad-i-Afrinji (a. Raza) of Abu Talib. (b) Persian text, Ed. Williamson, Mirza Hasan Ali and Mir Qudrat Ali, Hindustani Press, 1812. (c) Persian Text Ed. Hussain Khidyu Jim, Tehran, 1352 H. (d) Eng. tr. Charles Stewart as 'Travels of Mirza Abu Taleb Khan in Asia, Africa and Europe during the years 1799 to 1803 (New Delhi, 1972). Written in 1803. It is chiefly an account of Abu Talib's travels to various foreign countries, including London; but it also has very useful

- references on the History of Awadh, including the marriage celebrations of Wazir Ali, of which he was an eye-witness.
208. Majmua-i-Rasail (Salar Jang). It contains a copy of the Treaty signed by Asaf-ud-daulah on 1st September, 1785 with the East India Company.
 209. Majmua Khutut Muntakhib Sarkar Company Angrez Bahadur Mutalliq Suba Awadh (A.P. Archives). The title itself explains the contents. It is useful only for the Nawabi of Saadat Ali and the later Kings of Awadh.
 210. Majmua-i-Khutoot (CRO)
 211. Majmua Tawarikh-i-Bedar (Agra University Library) of Sanath Singh Bedar. Written in 1200 H (1786). It gives chronograms of different events of Awadh and is very invaluable for the chronology of the History of Awadh.
 212. (a+b+c) Majmua Wajidyah Sultani (a. Masud) of Wajid Ali Shah. (b) Persian text, Matba-i-Sultani (Lucknow, 1266 H) - It also contains a full page picture of the King with a sword in his hand. (c) Urdu version of (b) of the same name (Matba-i-Sultani, Lucknow, 1267 H) - The picture given in this book shows that the King is sitting on a chair with a Farman in his hand. It is the same book, which is referred as 'Majmua-i-Wajidya' in Bani. It is a collection of Miscellaneous articles on different subjects, some of which are purely religious. Most important parts of this work are about the drill of the armies, length of the rule of different Mughal Emperors and Urdu and Persian idioms and phrases.
 213. Maktubat-i-Sarkar Kampani Banam Wajid Ali Shah (Library of the Raja of Mahmoodabad). These are both in Persian and Urdu.
 214. Maktubat-i-Wajid Ali Shah banam Governor General (Library of the Raja of Mahmoodabad).
 215. Maktubat Shah-i-Awadh (AMU). It contains copies of many applications, petitions and decrees of criminal courts of Amjad Ali Shah. Also has miscellaneous notes on the previous Kings and Nawabs dating from 1806 onwards.
 216. Mansurul Maktubat, also called Insha-i-Mansurul Maktubat, Insha-i-Mansur and Maktubat-i-Mansuri (Tagore). Compiled in a book form by Awadhi Lal in 1210 H (1795-96) but he added some of the documents to it later on. It is a collection of

- contemporary letters and administrative orders and throws light on the History of Awadh from Saadat Khan to Asaf-ud-daulah. Some documents pertain to Saadat Ali and the nobles of Awadh.
217. Maqamat-i-Mazharya (Nadwa) of Najaf Ali. Completed in Jamad-II, 1282 H (October-November, 1865). It deals with the life of the famous saint and poet Mirza Mazhar Jan-i-Janan, whose letters have also been incorporated in this work. It has occasional but useful references on Awadh.
 218. Masakin-i-Falsafi (Raza) of Rai Mannu Lal Falsafi. The author was a learned man of his age and a specialist mathematician. His forefathers had served the Mughal Emperors from Shah Jahan onwards. He himself retired from service in 1827 and settled at Farrukhabad where he wrote a number of books on History, Geography and other subjects; but he suddenly expired in 1832, leaving behind the drafts of all his works untrimmed, which were subsequently copied and arranged by his son. The work in question is basically a book on Geography; but has some useful historical references pertaining to Awadh. Its topographical details have been copied from other well known works, like Haft Aqlim, Hadiqat-ul-Aqalim etc.
 219. Mazahirul-Asrar (Raza) of Abdul Razzaq Yamni. It contains an eye-witness account of the days of Ghaziuddin Haidar and is very reliable.
 220. Miftah-i-Khazain (LMB) of Shambhunath, who was in the employment of Mir Qasim, Shuja-ud-daulah, Shah Alam, Joseph Fowke and Francis Fowke and is not only an eye-witness to the events he describes but also an actual participant in many of these. Written in 1197 H (1783). It also has a collection of contemporary letters.
 221. Mirat-i-Aftab Numa (Raza) of Abdur Rehman entitled Shah Nawaz Khan. Written in 1803. It is very sketchy but provides very useful information about Shah Alam-II and his times. There is a discrepancy of one year in his dates.
 222. Mirat-i-Ahmedi (Raza) of Ali Muhammad Khan. Written in 1175 H (1716). Although it is mainly a History of Gujrat but also deals with the affairs of the Mughal Empire and the Third Battle of Panipat, all of which is very accurate and reliable. Many facts

- given by him are not found elsewhere.
223. (a+b+c) Mirat-ul-Ahwal-i-Jahan Numa (a. Raza) of Aqa Ahmad Behbahani. (b) Photo-print of OPL MS with notes by Shyesta Khan (Patna, 1992). (c) Eng. tr. A.F. Haidar as 'India in the Early 19th Century: An Iranian's Travel Account (Patna, 1996). Written in 1224 H (1809). He came to India from Iran in 1202 H (1787-88) and travelled extensively throughout northern India, including Awadh, where he stayed at Faizabad and Lucknow for about 2 years (1807-8). He finally settled at Patna, where he wrote the present work. For some affairs of Awadh, he relies on Imad-us-Saadat and Tohfatul Alam. The latter work he copies word by word. However, he supplements his account by his own enquiries, which are the most important parts of this work and throw new light on the origin of Wazir Ali. Since he enjoyed the bounty of Bahu Begam at Faizabad, he is partial to her and suppresses her intrigues during the brief Nawabi of Wazir Ali.
 224. Mirat-ul-Auza (Raza, AMU) of Munshi Lalji. Written in 1853. He and his forefathers had served as Waqia Nigars to the Residents of Lucknow. He had first hand knowledge of the affairs of Awadh. It deals with various aspects of the revenue administration, judiciary, some offices of the Central Government, mode of life of the people of Awadh and the buildings of Lucknow.
 225. Mirat-ul-Bilad (CRO) of Hashim Ali Rizvi. Written 1819. Basically, it is a book on geography but also contains some useful historical notes.
 226. Mirat-ul-Wardat, also called Tarikh-i-Chaghtai or Tarikh-i-Muhammad Shahi (Raza, AMU) of Muhammad Shafi Tehrani Warid. Began in 1142 H (1729-30) and completed in 1147 H (1734-35). He and his father had served under the Mughal Emperors. Since his account is confirmed and corroborated by other contemporary sources, he has rightly claimed that he wrote from the days of Bahadur Shah-I to Muhammad Shah what he saw with his own eyes. A reliable work for the early career of Saadat Khan. Some of the details given him, say for example the rebellion of Bhagwant Singh, are not to be found elsewhere.
 227. (a+b) Muntakhab Tanqihul Akhbar (a. Raza) of Kundan Lal

- Ashki Alhi. Bearing his seal dated 1255 H (1839-40). The Manuscript in question is the original copy of the author and contains chronology of some important events, some of which pertain to Awadh. (b) Text (Sultan-ul-Matabey, n.y.) : It has further been elaborated by Mannu Lal, son of the author. It is more exhaustive than the Manuscript.
228. Muntakhab-ul-Insha (Patna University). It has some letters pertaining to Asaf-ud-daulah.
 229. Muzaffar Nama (Salar Jang) of Munshi Mir Karam Ali Khan. Written in 1186 H (1772-73). A detailed History of the Nawabs of Bengal from Ali Verdi Khan to the year of its completion. Useful for the relations of the rulers of Awadh with that of Bengal. The author was in the employment of the Nawabs of Bengal and had, therefore, every opportunity of witnessing whatever he writes in his History.
 230. Nadir-uz-Zamani (Khalsa College, Amritsar; K.P. Jaiswal Research Institute, Patna) of Khushhal Chand. It is merely a general History upto the 13th Regnal Year of Muhammad Shah. Not much useful.
 231. (a+b) Nasaih Akhtari (a. OPL) of Wajid Ali Shah Akhtar. (b) ed. M. Shafi' Rizvi, (Lucknow, 1275 H). It deals with the etiquette and manners.
 232. Parwanjat Ahd-i-Asaf-ud-Daulah (RI) 2 Vols. It contains Parwanas related to the Nawabi of Asaf-ud-daulah and Saadat Ali. Most of these are about the grant of lands and stipends. On the fore-leaf is a seal of Asaf-ud-daulah, which contains his full title.
 233. Persian Documents at CRO & U.P. State Archives at Lucknow. A list of these is available at the Archives and should be consulted. Some of these have been indicated by M. Alam in 'The Crisis of the Empire' at p. 319.
 234. Persian Document at India office library London, IO 4471, 4485, 4506 (Details vide M. Alam : op. cit., p. 320).
 235. Persian Documents with the Department of History, AMU (See Muzaffar Alam : op. cit., p. 321).
 236. Persian Letters of Claude Martin, 1796 (India Office Library, London, Add MSS 16, 849). These have been addressed to Asaf-ud-daulah, Jhau Lal and others.

237. Perisan Letters Issued, Copies and originals (NAI), These are the letters issued by the East India Company's officers to different rulers of India, including Awadh.
238. Persian Letters Received, copies and originals (NAI).
239. Qanun-i-Khandan-i-Nawab Ali Muhammad Khan (Saulat) of Muhammad Murtuza Khan. It was written during the reign of Muhammad Saeed Khan of Rampur and contains genealogies and other details about the family of Ali Muhammad Khan.
240. Qissa-i-Darbar-i-Rajkumar (My Manuscript - Qureshi) of Bindraban. Completed in Rabi-II, 1198 H (May-June, 1784). Picked up from the garbage of a local garbage dealer. It is a Persian translation of a Sanskrit tale undertaken at the command of Asaf-ud-daulah by one of his clerks. It is the only historical fact that it conveys. The tale itself has no historical value.
241. (a+b) Qissa-i-Miskin (a. NL) of Tahmasp Khan Miskin. (b) An abridged Eng. tr. by P. Setu Madhav Rao as 'Tahmasp Nama' (Bombay, 1967). Written in 1782. He remained in the employment of the Governor of Punjab from 1748-1762, Najib-ud-daulah and Zabita Khan till 1772 and then Najaf Khan till 1782. He writes about all of them from his own personal knowledge. He is an eye-witness of the events he describes. It is very authentic for all of them and the relations of these personalities with the Nawabs of Awadh.
242. Rahat Afza (Salar Jang) of Muhammad Ali bin Muhammad Sadiq al-Husaini. It is a History of the Timurides from Timur to Alamgir-II and has references on Awadh also. It is too brief to be of any independent value.
243. Risala dar Ahval-i-Zamindaran-i-Kakori (ASB) of Muhammad Faiz Bakhsh.
244. Risalah-i-Khan-Dauran wa Muhammad Shah (B.M. OR 180).
245. Risalah-i-Subh-i-Sadiq (AMU) of Muhammad Sadiq Khan Akhtar. He was a man of great learning of his time and portrays the evils of the contemporary society and administration of Amjad Ali Shah in a vivid manner.
246. (a+b) Roznamcha Abdul Qadir Ghamgin (a. Raza) of Molvi Abdul Qadir, who died in 1265 H. He visited many cities of India including Lucknow, which he narrates datewise. (b) Urdu

- tr. Muhammad Ayyub Qadri as 'Viqai Abdul Qadir Khani' or 'Ilm-o-Amal' (Karachi. 1960).
247. Roznamcha-i-Darbar-i-Abu Muzaffar Ghazi-ud-din Haidar (RI).
 248. Ruq'a-i-Mutfarriqat (OPL bound with Majmua Ruq'at-i-Bharamal Waghairah) of Bechu Ram. It is invaluable for the visit of Safdar Jang to Patna.
 249. Sahifa-i-Iqbal (BM Or. 1900). It pertains to the reign of Muhammad Shah and needs corrections from more authentic sources.
 250. (a+b) Sahifa-i-Sultaniyah (a. Imambara Sibtainabad, Calcutta) of Wajid Ali Shah. (b) Matba-i-Sultani (Calcutta, 1289 H). It is a book of religious importance dealing with certain verses of Al-Qur'an. Historically, its importance lies in the description of inconveniences caused to Wajid Ali Shah by some of his dependents; particularly Munshi Muhammad Safdar Ali Khan.
 251. (a+b) Sawaneh Chait Singh (a. India Office Library MS) of Ali Ibrahim Khan. (b) Text & Eng. tr. Shayesta Khan (Patna, 1993). Written in November, 1787. An eye-witness account of the rebellion of Chait Singh and the visit of Asaf-ud-daulah and Haidar Beg to the Banaras region on this occasion.
 252. Sawaneh Lucknow (Patna University) of Najabat Hussain Khan, who has recorded his personal experiences and affairs of Lucknow during the course of his visit to it during the kingship of Amjad Ali Shah. It is important for the religious attitude of the people of Lucknow during those days.
 253. (a+b) Shah Alam Nama (a. ASB) of Ghulam Ali Khan. (b) Persian text of Vol. I only (ASB, Calcutta). Except his eulogistic remarks peculiar to every court flatterer, it is rich in accurate dates and details about Shah Alam-II and his times.
 254. (a+b) Shah Nama-i-Munawwar Kalam (a. Raza, OPL) of Shiv Das Lucknawi. (b) Eng. tr. Syed Hasan Askari (Patna, 1980). A very well written, accurate and reliable work from the reign of Farrukhsiyar to the 4th Regnal Year of Muhammad Shah. It throws light on the early career of Saadat Khan; particularly about his posting in Agra.
 255. Sharaif-i-Usmari (AMU) of Ghulam Hussain Siddiqi Firshori Bilgrami. It deals with the leading families of Bilgram and throws

- light on the Nawabs and nobles of Awadh also.
256. Shigra Nama (Salar Jang) of Aitisamuddin. Written in 1781. It is mainly an account of the embassy of the author to the court of George-III of England; but also has some useful references about Shah Alam-II.
 257. Shuqqa of Asaf-ud-daulah, 2 Zilhijj, 1188 H (3rd February, 1775) (CRO). It pronounces the attitude of Asaf-ud-daulah towards the rent-free holdings.
 258. (a+b+c+d+e) Siyar-ul-Mutakhirin (a. Amir, Tagore) of Ghulam Hussain Tabatabai. (b) Urdu tr. as 'Marat-us-Salatin' (Newal Kishore Press). It is merely a summary translation. (c) Persian Text (Newal Kishore Press) (d) Eng. tr. of some portions by John Briggs as 'Siyar-ul-Mutakherin' (Allahabad, 1924). (e) Eng. tr. by Mustafa as 'The Seir Mutakherin'. It is not a reliable translation. It often omits dates but the translator was a contemporary of Shuja-ud-daulah and adds some new facts about the Nawabs of Awadh from his own personal knowledge. The main book itself is a very well known work by a contemporary, who himself was an actor on the scenes he portrays. Its chief defects are that he is pro English, suppresses many things unfavourable to them and has highly eulogistic statements about his correlative religionists, which are not authenticated by other more reliable sources.
 259. (a+b) Soot-ul-Mubarak (a. Raza) of Wajid Ali Shah. (b) Text, Matba-i-Sultani, Lucknow, 1269 H). It deals with the Indian music and its History. Its 4th and 6th chapters are included in 'Bani' with certain modifications and versified Urdu translation of its first and second chapters are an Appendix entitled 'Masnavi Chanchal of Malazul Kalamat'.
 260. Sulalatus Siyar (Raza, Salar Jang) of Abul Qasim bin Muhammad Ali Samnani. Written in 1222 H (1807). A short and tabulated History of Persia, Afghanistan and India from the earliest times to the year of its completion. The information given by him is name of the ruler, father's name, length of reign, date of death and selected events.
 261. Sultan-ul-Hikayat (Raza, Nadwa) of Munshi Lalji. Began in Ramzan, 1269 H (June-July, 1853) and finished in Moharram, 1270 H (October, 1853). It contains merely a summary treatment of the History of Awadh but is very useful for the chronograms it gives.

262. Sultan-ut-Tawarikh (Tagore) of Raja Ratan Singh Bahadur Zakhmi. Written during the Kingship of Muhammad Ali Shah. His father, Rai Balak Ram, was Mir Atish under Asaf-ud-daulah. He started his career under Ghaziuddin Haidar and served the kings of Awadh till the extinction of the dynasty in 1856. His treatment of his own days is reliable and authentic but bases his account of the Nawabs of Awadh on Imad-us-Saadat. It is very rarely that he adds something new in this portion of his book.
263. (a+b) Swaneh Umri Shaikh Ali Hazin also called 'Tazkirat-ul-Ahwal' of Shaikh Ali Hazin. (b) Eng. tr. F.C. Balfour as 'Tazkirat-ul-Ahwal - The Life of Shaikh Muhammad Ali Hazin written by Himself (London, 1830). Written in 1154 H (1741). It is an autobiography of the famous saint and poet Shaikh Ali Hazin and is invaluable for Nadir Shah's invasion on India.
264. Tabsirat-un-Nazirin (OPL, AMU, ASB) of Syed Muhammad Bilgrami. Written in 1182 H (1768-69). It is chiefly a work on distinguished Muslims of Bilgram in Awadh by a contemporary, who has meticulously and thoroughly investigated about the events he describes. His dates and details are accurate. The biographical sketches given by him contain a lot of historical material pertaining to the History of Awadh. Some of the events described by him are not to be found elsewhere.
265. Tanqih-ul-Akhbar-fi-Asar-ul-Adwar (Raza) of Rai Mannu Lal Falsafi. The author expired before giving it final touches. It remained lying for quite a long time with his son Ashki, who ultimately copied and arranged the drafts of his father in the present form in 1256 H (1840) during the Kingship of Muhammad Ali Shah. It is a voluminous work, spreading over seven volumes and each running into more than thousand pages. Unfortunately, all the 7 volumes do not appear to have survived. Only First, Second and Seventh Volumes are preserved in the Raza Library. Out of these, the seventh is exclusively devoted to the History of China. The portions on Awadh of rest of the volumes are chiefly based on Siyar-ul-Mutakhirin. At places, he copies this work word by word.

266. Tarikh-i-Aali (OPL) of Shaikh Muhammad Saleh Qudrat. He wrote it at the request of an English officer James Brown, in whose service he was. It deals with the Mughal Emperors from Bahadur Shah-I to Shah Alam-II and contains some important details over and above those given in other sources.
267. Tarikh-i-Afghani (Saulat) of Shaikh Abdulla Jahanabadi. Finished on 5th August, 1843. It deals with the career of Hafiz Rahmat Khan of Rampur. In writing this book, the author relies on other extant Historical sources, which he often mentions in the text; but supplements it with the information he received from the Afghans residing at Pilibhit. It is, therefore, an important work on the History of Rampur and also refers to the corresponding events of Awadh.
268. Tarikh-i-Ahmad Shahi (Persian MS OR 2005, British Library, London). Anon. The author seems to be a courtier of Emperor Ahmad Shah, about whose reign he has produced this accurate and authentic account. It is very helpful about the careers of Safdar Jang and Shuja-ud-daulah and their relations with the Emperor.
269. Tarikh-i-Alamgir Sani (NL). Anon. Best possible account on the life and times of the Mughal Emperor Alamgir-II.
270. Tarikh-i-Awadh (AMU) of Munshi Gursahi. Written in 1242 H (1826-27). It is a mere summary of Imad-us-Saadat.
271. Tarikh-i-Badshahan-i-Hind (RI). Anon. No date. A general History of India from the ancient times down to Humayun; but its Appendix contains a description of some cities of India and the mausoleum of Safdar Jang at Delhi.
272. (a+b) Tarikh-i-Bangala (a. Salar Jang) of Munshi Salimullah. (b) Persian text ed. S. Imamuddin (Dacca, 1981). A History of the Nawabs of Bengal down to 1749. Written during the Governorship of H. Vansittart (1760-64). It is useful only for Safdar Jang's invasion on Patna.
273. Tarikh-i-Benares (OPL, Preserved as 'Zikr-us-Siyar' at British Museum Or 6652) of Ghulam Hussain Khan. It traces the History of the Rajas of Benares from Mansa Ram to 1785 and their relations with the Nawabs of Awadh and the English. The author is a court flatterer and highly laudatory to the Rajas. It needs to - be read with other sources.

274. Tarikh-i-Benares (OPL) of Ghulam Hussain Kamboh. It deals with the zamindars of Benares.
 275. (a+b+c) Tarikh-i-Bhao Jhanku also called Tarikh-i-Ibrahim Khan (a. Raza) of Ali Ibrahim Khan (b) Uru tr. by Mahdi in Safar, 1209 H (August-September, 1794) and published by Matba-i-Ahmadi, near Takiya Shah Nasrullah, Gaughat. (c) A major portion of it has also been translated in English by Elliot and Dowson, VIII, 257-297. It is a History of the Marathas down to 1786-87; but the pre and post-1761 narratives are very sketchy. Its main theme is the third Battle of Panipat, which is chiefly based on Siyar-ul-Mutakhirin and the account of Kashiraj.
 276. Tarikh-i-Bharatpur (OPL) of Anand Rai. It is chiefly a History of the Jats but also has references on the affairs of Awadh, which are of no independent value.
 277. Tarikh-i-Chaghtai, also called Tazkirat-us-Salatin-i-Chaghtai or Tarikh-i-Mughalya (a. Amir) of Muhammad Hadi alias Kamwar Khan. (b) Persian text ed. Muzaffar Alam (Bombay, 1980). The author was in the employment of Muhammad Shah and an eye witness to various events related to the early career of Saadat Khan, for which and other happenings concerning the latter, he is very reliable and accurate.
 278. (a+b) Tarikh Dar Halat-i-Ahmad Shah Abdal or Ashraf-i-Usmani (a. Raza) of Ghulam Hasan Samin. (b) Eng. tr. William Irvine, Indian Antiquary, XXXVI, March, 1907. Written in 1197 H (1782-83) at the request of Capt. Scott. It is chiefly a History of the Shaikhzadgans of Bilgram but also throws light on the invasion of Ahmad Shah Durrani on northern India in 1756-57. It is exaggerated at many places.
 279. (a+b) Tarikh Dar Halat-i-Safar Muhammad Badshah (a. Raza) of Anand Ram Mukhlis. (b) Persian text ed. Athar Ali (Rampur, 1946). Finished on 12th Ramzan, 1158 H (27th September, 1745). The Manuscript is an autographed copy of the author. It deals with the invasion of Muhammad Shah on Bangarh in conjunction with Safdar Jang and is based on the diary of the author, which he maintained during the course of these operations.
 280. Tarikh-i-Faiz Bakhsh (Salar Jang) of Shiv Parshad. Written in 1190 H (1776). It is mainly a History of the Rohillas but also writes about the corresponding events of Awadh. Having been written at the instigation of the English, he suppresses many things but is better than other Afghan sources.

281. (a+b) Tarikh-i-Farah Bakhsh (a. AMU) of Munshi Faiz Bakhsh. (b) Eng. tr. William Hoey as 'Memoirs of Delhi' (Allahabad, 1888) and 'Memoirs of Faizabad' (Allahabad, 1889). Its portion dealing with the affairs of Delhi is based on the information provided to him by the persons who had migrated to Faizabad from Delhi and were in the employment of Shuja-ud-daulah and Asaf-ud-daulah and for the rest he himself is an eye-witness, being in the employment of Bahu Begam. Basically, it is a History of Faizabad and centres around Bahu Begam but facts relating to the Nawabs and nobles of Awadh are also intertwined. Although he asserts that he wrote this work at his own conviction and got an inspiration to write it after an English Collector of Gorakhpur made enquiries from him about the History of Faizabad through Ghulam Ali Naqvi, the author of Imad-us-Saadat, yet the internal evidence suggests that, like other Persian works on Awadh, it has also been got written by the Britishers with a view to propagate about the History of Faizabad the facts they wanted to make current and the useful facts and details contained in it are, in fact, a by-product of the same process. The manner in which the author conceals the fact that Bahu Begam duly and without any hesitation acknowledged Wazir Ali as her grandson, gives a fanciful story about the death of Asaf-ud-daulah, deliberately glosses over the account of the deposition of Wazir Ali, of which he was an eye-witness, by saying that Ghulam Ali Naqvi, whose account of it is merely a bundle of lies and mis-statements, has already written about it, portrays the spoliation of the Begams of Awadh at the instigation of Warren Hastings in a very diluted manner and wrongly says that the sexual deficiency in Asaf-ud-daulah was not healed after treatment, which is not borne out by other evidence on the subject, clearly tend to indicate what I have asserted in the preceding lines.
282. Tarikh-i-Farrukhabad (Qaimganj, Raza) of Mufti Waliullah. Written about 1245 H (1829-30). It is based on Siyar-ul-

- Mutakhirin, Imad-us-Saadat and other Persian works; but also adds some new facts from his own personal knowledge and enquiries, which are the most important parts of this work.
283. Tarikh-i-Gorakhpur (AMU) of Muhammad Mohibullah. It is a History of Gorakhpur from the Muslim invasions to 1797 and is useful.
 284. Tarikh-i-Ikhtidaryah (A.P. Archives) of Mehdi Ali Khan Iqtidar-ud-daulah. Written in 1865. The author was a great grandson of Shuja-ud-daulah. This work is very important due to the access of the author to oral History within the family of the Nawabs, about whom he writes this general History down to the year of its completion.
 285. Tarikh-i-Imad-ul-mulk (OPL) of Abdul Qadir alias Ghulam Qadir Khan Jaisi. Written in 1250 H (1834-35). Having been written with great care, this later work is an important and useful source for the life and career of Imad-ul-mulk and his relations with the Nawabs of Awadh.
 286. (a+b) Tarikh-i-Jaunpur or Jaunpur Nama (a. AMU) of Khairuddin. (b) Eng. tr. Capt. R.W. Pogson (Calcutta, 1814). It is basically the History of Jaunpur and its buildings; but has occasional useful references on the Nawabs of Awadh; particularly their policy with regard to the resumption of stipends and endowments to learned men.
 287. Tarikh-i-Kharaj Nadir Shah ba Hindustan or Tarikh-i-Muhammad Shahi (NL) of Muhammad Bakhsh Ashob. Written in 1785. It is a very detailed account of Nadir Shah's invasion and brief accounts of Muhammad Shah's operations on Bangarh and the first invasion of Ahmad Shah Abdali. The author was an eye-witness to all the events he describes.
 288. Tarikh-i-Lucknow (I do not know where it is preserved-Listed as per the information of W.H. Siddiqi : Lucknow, p. 98) of Muhammad Zaheer-ud-din Khan Bilgrami. Written in 1292 H (1875).
 289. Tarikh-i-Manazil-i-Hindustan (AMU) of Muhammad Khalilullah Khan. It gives a description of the important towns of India including Lucknow. However, in view of more detailed references on Lucknow available elsewhere it is not of much help.

290. Tarikh-i-Manazilul Futuh (NL) of Muhammad Jafar Shamlu. Another eye-witness account of the Third Battle of Panipat. Although it is sketchy but adds some new information not found in the much celebrated work of Kashiraj.
291. Tarikh-i-Mohtashim or Mohtashim Khani (OPL, AMU) of Muhammad Mohtashim. Written in 1253 H (1837-38). Till the Nawabi of Saadat Ali, it is based on Imad-us-Saadat, to which it often copies verbatim, but thereafter he writes from his own personal knowledge. He was an eye-witness to most of the events he describes.
292. Tarikh-i-Mubaraknama (AMU). It is a History of the Mughals till the middle of the Eighteenth Century.
293. (a+b) Tarikh-i-Muhammadi (a. Raza, OPL) of Mirza Muhammad Harisi. (b) Persian Text of Part-II ed. Imtiaz Ali Khan Arshi (Aligarh, 1960). It contains brief references of important events and deaths till 1777. The copy in the Raza Library is in the handwriting of the author.
294. Tarikh-i-Muzaffari (Raza, AMU, Tagore : The correct sequence of pagination of the Tagore MS is 1-352, 359-60, 355-58, 353-4, 361-873, 874-84, 875-6, 881-2, 879-886, 885-6, 877-8, 887-onwards. This manuscript is also badly mutilated and most particularly towards the end) of Muhammad Ali Khan Ansari. Written in about 1800. It chiefly copies Siyar-ul-Mutakhirin till 1780 and thereafter its author writes from his own knowledge. He adds new facts even in the portions dealing with the History of the period till 1780. His information seems to have been derived from his close association with the English at Calcutta. Many facts mentioned by him are not found elsewhere. Without its inputs a number of events relating to Awadh can not be properly dealt with.
295. Tarikh-i-Punjab (Jamia, CRO) of Ghulam Muhiuddin alias Buta Shah. The entire work deals with the History of the Sikhs. It is very important for the Durrani invasions on northern India.
296. (a+b) Tarikh-i-Saadat (a. Amir) of Imam Bakhsh Bedar. (b) Urdu tr. Syed Ahsan-uz-zafar (Lucknow, 2000). Bedar served different Englishmen both at Lucknow and in the British territories from 1785-1809. He finally secured the patronage of the rulers of Awadh and passed his time under them after 1813. He dedicated this work first to Saadat Ali and then to Ghazi-ud-din Haidar. Having passed most of his time in Awadh, he witnessed a lot of things and knew more than what he wrote. It is a versified History of Awadh from the beginning till the Nawabi of Saadat Ali. Only selected events have been taken up by him. Since he presented his work to Saadat Ali and Ghaziuddin Haidar, he is hostile to Wazir Ali; but despite that, adds some valuable facts about him. He is also prejudiced against the Rohillas and some of his facts are absolutely wrong. The Manuscript is incomplete and most important details about the Nawabi of Saadat Ali and its date of completion are missing.

297. Tarikh-i-Saadat-i-Javed (AMU) of Harnam Singh. Written between 1805 and 1814. It is a court flatterer's account and is highly eulogistic to the Nawabs of Awadh. Its general History from the earliest times down to his own has been copied from other works. Its most important part is the portion which contains biographical sketches of the nobles of the Mughal Empire including that of Awadh but these are not free from blemishes.
298. Tarikh-i-Shah Alam or Shah Alam Nama (NL) of Munna Lal. Written in 1811. Though devoid of many dates and details, it contains some additional information on the life and times of Shah Alam-II. It enlightens much when read with Ghulam Ali's Shah Alam Nama.
299. Tarikh-i-Shahadat-i-Farrukhsiyar wa Julus-i-Muhammad Shah (OPL) of Mirza Muhammad Bakhsh Ashob. It is a general History of the Mughals down to 1745.
300. (a+b+c) Tarikh-i-Shahiya-i-Nishapurya (a. Raza, Shah Abdus Salam, Shahganj, Lucknow) of Qasim Ali. (b) Persian text ed. Shah Abdus Salam (Rampur, 1998). (c) Urdu tr., Shah Abdus Salam, New Delhi. He was an eye-witness to the events he describes from Saadat Ali to Muhammad Ali Shah and is very valuable. For previous Nawabs, he depends on other works, chiefly Imad-us-Saadat.
301. Tarikh-i-Shakir Khani or Tazkirah-i-Shakir Khan (NL, British Museum Add 6585) of Shakir Khan. Whereas the father of the author was a Mansabdar of 7,000 and Governor of Delhi on the eve of the invasion of Nadir Shah, Shakir Khan was a Bakhshi at that time and became Diwan under Alamgir-II. Except the lack of chronological treatment of the events, the author has rendered an eye-witness account since the beginning of the reign of Muhammad Shah down to that of Shah Alam-II and is very reliable and accurate for the corresponding events of Awadh.

302. Tarikh-i-Suba-i-Ilahabad (Allahabad University MS)
303. Tarjuma Khat-i-Ribtah Holkar (RI). Anon. No date. It is a Persian translation of a contemporary Marathi letter and deals with the Third Battle of Panipat.

Tazkirahs : The following list contains the title of such contemporary works dealing with the biographical sketches of the Persian and Urdu poets and extracts from their poetical compositions. These not only help in tracing the different stages of the patronage of the Persian and Urdu poets by the Nawabs and Kings of Awadh and their nobles but also corroborate and substantiate the accounts of the Persian chroniclers and add new facts not found elsewhere. For the sake of convenience of the scholars, these are being listed here together and the sequence has been maintained throughout this work.

304. Atishkada-i-Aazar (Salar Jang) of Haji Lutf Ali Baig Aazar. Written during 1760-1779.
305. Gulzar-i-Ibrahim (Raza) of Ali Ibrahim Khan. Written in 1198 H (1784).
306. Gulshan-i-Sukhan (Raza) of Mirza Kazim alias Mardan Ali Khan Mubtila. Written in 1195 H (1781).
307. Gulshan-i-Guftar (Salar Jang) of Khwaja Khan Hamid. Written in 1752.
308. Gul-i-Rana (Salar Jang) of Lachhmi Narain Shafiq. Began in 1181 H (1767-68) and finished in 1182 H (1768-69). Additions and alterations were made as late as 1187 H (1773-74).
309. Maqalat-ush-Sho'ra (Raza) of Qiyamuddin Hairat Akbarabadi. Written in 1173 H (1759-60).
310. Maddh-ush-Sho'ra (Raza) of Inayat Hussain Khan Mehjor.
311. Majma-ul-Intikhab (Salar Jang) of Shah Muhammad Kamal Chisti. First copy finished on 25th Ziqad, 1219 H (25th February 1805), which is preserved in Salar Jang Museum; but he is reported to have made additions in it till as late as 1254 H (1838-39).

312. Madhhatush Sho'ra (Salar Jang) of Qiyamuddin Hairat.
 313. (a+b) Majma-ul-Nafais (a Raza, Salar Jang) of Sirajuddin Ali Khan Arzoo. (b) Text ed. Abid Reza Bedar (Patna, n.y.). Written in 1164 H (1750-51).
 314. Makhzanul-Gharaib (Raza) of Ahmad Ali Khan Hashmi.
 315. Nashtar-i-Ishq (Raza) of Hussain Quli Khan Ashqi. Written in 1233 H (1810). Copy of the author.
 316. Riyaz-ush-Sho'ra (Salar Jang) of Ali Quli Khan Daghistani. Written in 1161 H (1748).
 317. Safina-i-Khushgo (OPL) of Bindrabandas Khushgo.
 318. Tabaqat-ush-Sho'ra (RI) of Qudratullah Shoq. Finished in 1189 H (1775).
 319. Takmillatush Sho'ra (Raza) of Qudratullah Shoq. Written in 1192 H (1778).
 320. Tazkirah-i-Daulat Shah (CRO) of Daulat Shah.
 321. Tazkirah Gulzar-i-Ibrahim (Raza) of Ali Ibrahim.
 322. Tazkirah-i-Katib (Raza) of Katib Safavi Muhammad Ali.
 323. (a+b) Tazkirah-i-Rekhta Goyan (a. Raza, Salar Jang) of Syed Fateh Ali Khan Gardezi. (b) Text ed. Abdul Haq, Aurangabad, 1933. Written in 1752 but additions made subsequently also.
 324. Tazkirah-i-Mardum Deeda (Anjuman Taraqqi-i-Urdu, Delhi) of Abdul Karim.
 325. Tazkirah Nataij-ul-Afkar (AMU) of Muhammad Qudratullah Gopamavi.
 326. Tazkirah Yud-i-Baiza (AMU) of Ghulam Ali Azad.
 327. Tazkirat-ush-Sho'ra (Raza) of Mir Ala-ud-daulah.
 328. Tazkirat-ush-Sho'ra (Raza) of Mir Ghulam Hussain Hasan.
329. Tazkirah Fatahan-i-Mumalkat-i-Hind wa Zikr Ahwal-i-Salatin-i-Mughalya wa Roznamcha-i-Ghadar-i-Dilli (A.P. Archives) of Hafiz Nawab Latifur Rehman Khan. The author was a grandson of Shah Nawaz Khan, author of Mirat-i-Aftab Numa. It is a general history of the Muslim rulers from the earliest times to 1857 and appears to have been written immediately after the Mutiny to supplement the author's diary of the Mutiny. Prior to 1857, he merely copies from other sources, chiefly Mirat-i-Aftab-Numa.

330. Tazkirah-i-Anand Ram or Bidai Wiqai (Raza, AMU) of Anand Ram Mukhlis, who was secretary to Wazir Qamruddin. He has recorded only those events, which he either himself witnessed or got authentic information about the rest. He is very accurate in respect of date and details and invaluable for the roles of Saadat Khan and Safdar Jang on the eve of the invasions of Nadir Shah and Ahmad Shah Durrani respectively and the operations of Muhammad Shah on Bangarh.
331. Tazkirat-ul-Muluk (ASB) of Yahya Khan. It has a brief chapter on the rulers of India towards the end, which is too sketchy to be of any independent value.
332. Tawarikh Nama-i-Sipahi (Qaimganj) of Saqidad Khan, whose father and grandfather were in the employment of Saadat Ali and Ghaziuddin Haidar and whatever they told to the author he has written it under their short biographical sketches. Some of the important events described by him are the death of Saadat Ali, arrival of Prince Jahangir at Lucknow and visit of Lord Hastings to Awadh. It is a dispassionate and authentic source on the History of Awadh.
333. Tilismat-ul-Khayalat (CRO, RAZA) of Newal Kishore Nazakat. Written in 1783. It is a collection of contemporary Persian letters exchanged between dignitaries of northern India including those which are exclusively related to the Nawabs and nobles of Awadh.
334. (a+b) Tohfa-i-Taza or Bulwantnama (a. ASB, OPL) of Khairuddin Muhammad. (b) Eng. tr. F. Curwen (Allahabad, 1875). Written in 1801. It is a reliable and detailed account of the Rajas of Benares from Mansa Ram to 1780 and their relations with the Nawabs of Awadh. At places, it needs correction from other contemporary sources and records. It also has occasional references to the events of post-1780 period, which he had planned to write in the fourth and fifth chapters of the present work but does not appear to have done so.
335. (a+b) Tohfatul Alam (Salar Jang, CRO) of Abdul Latif Shushtri. (b) Persian Text (Hyderabad, 1263 H). Written in 1802. The author was a traveller from Persia. He was present at Lucknow at the time of Wazir Ali's deposition. Being a personal friend of the English and Tafazzul Hussain, he indulges in exaggerations. His treatment of Wazir Ali's career after his flight from Benares is based on the information given to him by his English friends and is of the same category. It also throws light on some nobles of Awadh, buildings of Lucknow and other political events.

336. (a+b) Tohfatul Ahbab fi Bayan-ul-Ansab (Amir) of Muhammad Khalilullah Ansari. (b) Text and Urdu tr. Shah Abdus Salam (Lucknow, 2000). It deals with the ulema of Firangi Mahal.
337. Umra-i-Hyderabad wa Awadh (OPL) of Ghulam Ali Azad. It contains extracts on the Nawabs and nobles of Awadh from the author's celebrated work Khazana-i-Amrah.
338. Usul-un-naghamatul Asafi (ASB) of Ghulam Raza. It is a book on music written during the Nawabi of Asaf-ud-daulah.
339. (a+b) Vaqiat-i-Azfari (a. Raza, A.P. Archives) of Mirza Ali Bakht Bahadur Muhammad Zahiruddin Azfari Gurgani. (b) Urdu tr. Abdul Sattar (Madras, 1937). Commenced in 1211 H (1796-97) and finished after 1221 H (1806-7). He was a Mughal Prince and resided at Lucknow for 7 years during the Nawabi of Asaf-ud-daulah. For that period, he writes on the basis of his own personal observations. It reproduces several important letters written to him by the nobles of Awadh. He left Lucknow and went to Arcot in 1211 H (1796-97) but maintained correspondence with his relatives at Lucknow, on the basis of which and the information secured through other means, he came to know about the events happening there and records those in this book.
340. Various Collections of Contemporary Letters and Documents (CRO)
341. Viqai Kannauj (A.P. Archives) Anon. No date. It was written at the command of Saadat Ali, to whom it is dedicated. It is a very brief and sketchy History of Kannauj from the ancient times to the days of Saadat Ali and runs only in 14 pages. It has been extracted from other sources, like Mirat-i-Aftab Numa and Hadiqat-ul-Aqalim and contains nothing new.
342. (a+b+c+d) Viqai Zaman Nawab Asaf-ud-daulah (a. Raza) of Abu Talib. (b) Persian Text Ed. Abid Raza Bedar (Rampur, 1965). Its greatest defect is that it tries to correct the text of the Raza MS (Ms in Saulat is merely a hand-written copy of Raza MS on small chits) with the help of the English translation of the same work by Hoey. He has also committed mistakes in reading the Manuscript correctly at many places. (c) Eng. tr. William Hoey (Reprinted Lucknow, 1971). The translator often indulges in interpolations and is also wrong at many places. (d) Urdu tr. Sarvat Ali as 'Tafzih-ul-Ghaflin : Tarikh-i-Asafi'. The title of the English translation is 'History of Asaf-ud-daulah'. Written in 1797. An account of the author's life is scattered on various pages of the present work and, in a nutshell, in Maasir-i-Talibi-fi-Bilad-i-Afrinji. He himself admits that he was persecuted by the Nawabs and nobles of Awadh for 20 years. A perusal of his life also reveals that he was very anxious to implant himself as a revenue officer in Awadh, in which capacity he served for short durations; but could get no permanent place. Ultimately, in 1797, Sir John Shore promised him 'assistance' in this regard; but then he was involved in the deposition of Wazir Ali and left India without fulfilling his promise made to Abu Talib, whose financial distress, in the meantime, touched its lowest ebb. All his dependents, relatives and adherents left him and even some of his children and domestics abandoned him. It was at such a critical juncture of his life that Capt. Richardson of Calcutta met him, who not only provided him bread and butter but also took him to England at his own expenses. It was at the command of that man that he wrote the present work. At that time his heart and soul were torn asunder and his mind was filled with great anger for the Nawabs of Awadh and hence he is very hostile and severe on all of them and such nobles of Awadh who had persecuted him. Despite these lacunas, it is a very important, detailed and chronological account of the Nawabi of Asaf-ud-daulah and its chief merits are that it throws light on the social and administrative background of the nobles and the economic condition of Awadh.

343. Waqai' Awadh (State Museum, Lucknow) of Suraj Bhan, who was in the employment of the Nawabs of Awadh from 1808-1816. His brief notes on whatever transpired at the court of Lucknow contains such material which is not found elsewhere.
344. (a+b) Waqai' Dil Pazir Awadh (a. ASB, Salar Jang) of Abdul Ahd. (b) Eng. tr. M. Taqi Ahmad (Delhi, 1977) as 'Tarikh-i-Badshah

Begam'. It is basically a History of Badshah Begam, wife of Ghazi-ud-din Haidar, by a contemporary, who himself witnessed all the events he describes.

345. Waq'a'i Shah Alam Sani (NL). Anon. It is a diary of different occurrences which took place at Delhi and in different provinces of northern India between 1739 and 1799, meticulously maintained datewise by an anonymous resident of Delhi.
346. Yadgar-i-Bahaduri (CRO) of Bahadur Singh Bhatnagar. Written in 1249 H (1833-34). It borrows its facts from Imad-us-Saadat and Maadan-us-Saadat but adds new facts about topography, products, industry, and commerce, Hindu religious sects and biographical sketches of the poets.
347. Zubdatul Kawaif (Tagore) of Jai Gopal Saqib. Written in 1276 H (1859-60). The author and his father were in the employment of the Kings of Awadh and thus the author was an eye-witness to a number of events he describes. It is a short and connected History of Awadh from Saadat Khan to Wajid Ali Shah. Till the period of Ghaziuddin Haidar, he chiefly relies on other sources but is quite reliable and authentic for other Kings of Awadh.

E. Urdu

348. (a+b) Afsana-i-Ishq (a. Salar Jang) of Wajid Ali Shah. (b) Matba-i-Sultani, Lucknow (twice). Written in 1255 H (1839-40). It is a descriptive Masnavi.
349. (a+b) Afsana-i-Lucknow (a. Masud) of Siyadat Hasan Khan Syed Jalaluddin Haidar alias Hajjo Sharf. (b) Text ed. Syed Mahmood Naqvi (Delhi, 1985). Written in 1873.
350. Afsar-ut-Tawarikh (Masud). It is a collection of letters of Nawab Jamshed Begam to Wajid Ali Shah.
351. Akhbar-i-Hasan (Saulat, Raza) of Muhammad Hasan Khan. Written in 1250 H (1834-35). It is a History of the rulers of Rampur written by a great grandson of Hafiz Rehmat Khan and also throws light on the Nawabs and Kings of Awadh and the invasions of Ahmad Shah Durrani. Some exaggerations are there; but the author gives such facts about the family of the Nawabs of Rampur, which are not found elsewhere. As a whole, it is quite a useful work and most of the facts have been recorded by the author on the basis of his own personal observations and enquiries. The Manuscript preserved in the Raza Library, Rampur, is a copy of the same work; but the copyist has refined the language, omitted one or two words here and there and added a few facts in his own language, which are not found in the copy preserved at the Saulat Public Library, Rampur, which is older than it.

352. Al-Musajjalat fi Tarikh-ul-Quzzat (AMU) of Qazi Ahmadullah. It deals with the Qazis of Bilgram and throws light on the relations of Qazi M. Ihsan and Saadat Khan.

Diwans : These collections of the poetical compositions of the contemporary poets contain a lot of material on socio-economic-religious conditions under the Nawabs and Kings of Awadh. Some of these are also invaluable for political, architectural and other cultural details. However, Qasidas, which contain hyperbolic praise of their patrons, should never be taken at their face value and one should first acquaint himself with the biographical details of the poets to discern which of their compositions are the product of a biased mind. Since the Diwans of a number of poets have not survived, its extracts, given in the Tazkirahs, should be consulted.

353. Bayaz-i-Yavar (Masud) of Shaikh Imdad Ali Yavar.
 354. Diwan (AMU) of Ali Ausat Rashk.
 355. Diwan-i-Aishi (AMU) of Miyan Talib Ali Aishi.
 356. Diwan-i-Asaf-ud-daulah (Salar Jang, RI, ASB) of Asafuddaulah.
 357. Diwan-i-Hasrat (Raza) of Jafar Ali Hasrat.
 358. Diwan-i-Mushafi (Raza, OPL) of Ghulam Hamdani Mushafi.
 359. (a+b+c) Diwan-i-Mubarak also called Diwan-i-Salis Tasnif-i-Mubarak and included in Kulliyat-i-Som and Diwan-i-Mubarak Som (a. Salar Jang) of Wajid Ali Shah Akhtar. (b) Also published in 1273 H & 1277 H. (c) It and other poetical collections of Wajid Ali Shah Akhtar are required to be compared with the 'Diwan-i-Akhtar' preserved at Amir to decide with which Diwan this latter one tallies.
 360. Diwan-i-Nasikh (AMU) of Nasikh.
 361. Diwan-i-Qaim Chandpuri (AMU) of Qaim Chandpuri.
 362. Diwan-i-Shah Kamal Hussain (Raza) of Shah Kamal.

363. Diwan-i-Shaiq (Raza) of Mir Ghulam Hussain Shaiq.
 364. Diwan Zada (AMU) of Shah Hatim.
 365. (a+b) Huzun-i-Akhtar (a. Amir) of Wajid Ali Shah Akhtar. (b) Text, Calcutta, 1276 H, also published by Amjad Ali from Lucknow). Its Manuscripts are also at NL, AMU & Salar Jang.
 366. Ibrat Kada-i-Sami'an (Masud).
 367. Kulliyat-i-Mir Hasan (AMU) of Mir Hasan.
 368. Kulliyat-i-Hidayat (Arjuman Taraqqi-i-Urdu, Delhi) of Ghulam Hussain Hidayat.
 369. Kulliyat-i-Muntazar (Nadwa) of Nurul Islam Muntazar.
 370. Kulliyat-i-Som (Salar Jang) of Wajid Ali Shah.
 371. Guldasta-i-Hind (RI) of Molsworth and Syed Tajuddin. Written in 1848. Extracted from other sources in English and Persian and comes down to only 1803. Very brief, sketchy and of no value.
372. Intizam-ul-Raj or Intizam-i-Raj-i-Azamgarh (University Library, Edinburgh No. 238) of Girdhari. Written in 1801. It is a detailed History of the Rajas of Azamgarh based on the Qanungo papers.
 373. Israr-i-Wajidi (Tagore) of Muhammad Zahiruddin.
 374. (a+b) Jangnama-i-Dojora (Jamia) of Moazzam Abbasi Khalifa. (b) Ed. Muhammad Ayyub Qadri as 'Jangnama Asaf-ud-daulah wa Nawab Rampur' (Karachi, 1980). The Manuscript consulted by me at Jamia Millia, Delhi, was blank at many places because the copyist could not read the badly worm-eaten and mutilated portions of the Raza Library MS. The present edition fills these gaps and carries the advantage of having been prepared with the help of four other Manuscripts. The author was a well known poet and teacher of his time. The battle took place in his own region and he is a contemporary chronicler of the event, which he wrote in the same year in which it took place (1794). It is the earliest known account of the battle; but is not always reliable.
 375. (a+b) Jawabat-i-Blue Book (a. CRO, Raza) Also preserved at the Library of the Raja of Mahmoodabad bearing the title 'Jawabat-i-Shukuk Mundarijah Awadh Blu Book'. (b) English version : Reply to the charges against the King of Oudh (Calcutta, 1856). It is said to have been written by Wajid Ali Shah but according to Kamaluddin Haidar, the author of Swanihat-i-Salatin-i-Awadh,

- it was written by one Muzaffar Mussain Khan. It refutes the charges framed against Wajid Ali Shah by the English to justify the annexation of Awadh. Has some useful back references also. It is rather surprising that it contains some wrong historical facts.
376. (a+b) Khadang-i-Ghadar (IOL MS 132) of Moinuddin Hasan Khan along with the narrative of Munshi Jiwan Lal. (b) Eng. tr. C.T. Metcalf as 'Two Native narratives of the Mutiny' (London, 1890).
 377. Mahmoodabad Ki Tarikh (Raja of Mahmoodabad Library) of Ali Hasan. 5 Vols.
 378. (a+b) Mirat-ul-Ashbah-fi-Salatin-i-Asman Jah (a. Saulat). Anon. (b) Printed at Matba-i-Sultani, 1852. Written in 1852. It contains pictures of the Mughal Emperors and the Durrani Monarchs of Afghanistan and certain important dates about them.
 379. (a+b) Muraqqa-i-Khusravi (Tagore, Maqbool Alam Library, Patna) of Muhammad Azmat Ali. (b) Urdu text, Zaki Kakorvi (Lucknow) but it is not much reliable as he could not decipher its peculiar handwriting well. It is needed to be read with the original. Completed in 1286 H (1869-70). He was an eye-witness to the events related to the last four Kings of Awadh and portrays a vivid and reliable account thereof. It also traces the literary and cultural contributions of these kings. He relies on other works for the early period and some of his dates and details are not correct.
 380. Risala Wajidyah Sultani (Masud) of Wajid Ali Shah. It is a word by word Urdu translation of Majmua Wajidya Sultani already referred under Persian sources.
 381. (a+b) Riyaz-ul-Quloob (a. Salar Jang) of Wajid Ali Shah. (b) Text (Matba-i-Sultani, Calcutta, 1302 H). It is a selection of Tosha-i-Akhrat. It is a free and modified translation of a few chapters of Mulla Baqar Majlisi's Persian work 'Hayat-ul-Quloob'. A part of it is versified.
 382. Sarguzasht-i-Rajaha-i-Azamgarh (Edinburgh University Library No. 237) of Syed Amir Ali Rizvi. It is a connected History of the Rajas of Azamgarh.
 383. (a+b) Shikwa-i-Firang (a. Masud) of Siyadat Hasan Syed Jalaluddin Haidar Khan. (b) Text as 'Shikoh-i-Farang' (Lahore, 1973). Written in 1877.

384. Sibat-ul-Quloob (Ittihadya Library, Calcutta; House of Awadh, Calcutta; AMU & Imambara Matia Burj, Calcutta) of Wajid Ali Shah. 2 Vols. It has 48,150 couplets. It is a translation of Hayat-ul-Quloob of Mulla Muhammad Baqar Majlisi but also has some details about the author and his forefathers. It also contains a part of Riyaz-ul-Quloob.
385. Tanqih-ul-Kalam-fi-Tarikh-i-Bilgram (AMU) of Qazi Shariful Hasan. This History of Bilgram has chiefly been compiled with the help of Sharaif-i-Usmāni and Al-Musajjalat fi Tarikh-ul-Quzzat and is not of much independent value.
386. Tarikh-i-Aftab-i-Awadh (Tagore) of Mirza Muhammad Taqi. Began in 1874 and finished in 1885. Till the period of Saadat Ali, it is merely a summary of Imad-us-Saadat but thereafter, he writes from his own personal knowledge and is quite an important contemporary source by a resident of Lucknow.
387. (a+b) Tarikh-i-Awadh (Raza) of Hut Parshad. (b) Text (Fatehgarh, 1871). Written in 1849. It is based on other works and is purely of secondary importance.
388. Tarikh-i-Azamgarh (IOL MS 4038). Anon. It deals with the Rajas of Azamgarh.
389. Tarikh-i-Badei (Saulat) of Amirullah Tasleem. Written in 1881. The author was a talented man of his age, served both the rulers of Awadh and Rampur on responsible posts and died at Lucknow on 27th May, 1911. During the reign of Kalb Ali Khan of Rampur, he was given a book containing a History of the Dynasties and he versified it in 1881. It should, therefore, be considered as an official History of Rampur. It also throws light on the History of Awadh.
390. (a+b) Tarikh-i-Badr (a. Idara-i-Adbiyat-i-Urdu, Hyderabad). (b) Text ed. M. Ali 'Arsh Malihabadi. It contains letters of Badr-i-Alam to Wajid Ali Shah.
391. (a+b) Tarikh-i-Benares (Raza) of Syed Muhammad Rafey Rizvi Aali. (b) Text (Lahore, 1315 H). It is a brief but useful History of Benares. The author has consulted the papers of the Rajas of Benares for writing it.
392. Tarikh-i-Bhadohin (IOL No. 437) of Qazi Muhammad Sharif. Written in 1847. It deals with the family History of the author.
393. Tarikh-i-Firaq (OPL). It is a collection of the letters of Nawab

- Nawrozi Begam alias Jani Begam to Wajid Ali Shah.
394. (a+b) Tarikh-i-Ghizzalah (a. Dr. Qureshi). (b) ed. Syed Wasi Bilgrami (Agra, 1914). It contains letters of Wajid Ali Shah to Nawab Malka Ghizzala.
 395. Tarikh-i-Hind (CRO) of Hakim Shamsuddin Qadri. Written in 1237 H (1821-22).
 396. Tarikh-i-Jais (Nadwa). Anon.
 397. Tarikh-i-Jamshaidi (House of Awadh, Calcutta). Collected in 1275 H (1859). These are letters written by Nawab Jamshed Begam to Wajid Ali Shah.
 398. Tarikh-i-Mazhari (Raza) of Muhammad Mazhar Haq. It is a forged copy of Akhbar-i-Hasan. In order to dupe others, the author has changed the first 18 pages and incorporated some material from his own pen, otherwise it tallies word by word with the copy of Akhbar-i-Hasan preserved at the Saulat Public Library.
 399. (a+b+c+d+e) Tarikh-i-Mumtaz (a. Masud, Br. Museum OR-5288). (b) Ed. M. Baqar (Lahore, 1952). It is a collection of the letters of Wajid Ali Shah to Mumtaz Jahan Begam. Some other collections like (c) Tarikh-i-Khas, (d) Tarikh-i-Mashghalah and (e) Tarikh-i-Dehr are yet to be traced.
 400. Tarikh-i-Muraqqa-i-Jahan Numa (Saulat) of Mirza Muhammad Kazim Barlas. Written in 1919. Copied from other sources and of secondary importance only.
 401. Tarikh-i-Muzahhab (?). It contains letters of Wajid Ali Shah written to Sheda Begam.
 402. (a+b) Tarikh-i-Noor (a. OPL). (b) Text ed. Kalimuddin Ahmad (Patna, 1972). It contains letters of Wajid Ali Shah written to Noor-i-Zamani Begam.
 403. Tarikh-i-Rampur (Jamia). Anon. It is a connected History of the Nawabs of Rampur from Ali Muhammad Khan to Hamid Ali Khan. It is based on other works, which have extensively been cited.
 404. (a+b) Tarikh-i-Rashid-ud-din Khani (Salar Jang) of Ghulam Aman Khan. (b) Text (Hyderabad, 1296 H) Written in 1880. Based on other works and purely of secondary importance.
 405. Tarikh-i-Salatin-i-Awadh (Nadwa).
 406. Tarikh-i-Sikhkhan (Salar Jang). Anon. Written in 1795 H (1878).

It is a history of the Sikhs from Guru Nanak to Ranjit Singh, which also throws light on the Durrani invasions on the Punjab. It has been extracted from other works and is of purely secondary importance.

407. Tazkirah-i-Hukumatul Muslamin (Raza - Loharu Collection) of Muhammad Wahidullah. It is a general History of the principalities of India which sprang up in the Eighteenth Century and has been extracted from Siyar-ul-Mutakhirin, Tarikh-i-Muzaffari, Tawarikh-i-Marhata, Sujan-Charitra, Imad-us-Saadat etc. It also uses some books like Ajaibat-i-Rozgar and Tawarikh-i-Lucknow, which are still hidden in the obscurity. Thus the work is purely of a secondary importance but adds some new facts.
408. Viqai Khandan-i-Bangash (Qaimganj). Anon. It is a connected History of the Bangash Nawabs of Farrukhabad down to 1837. Barring the usual exaggerations of an indigenous source, it is quite reliable and also refers to such events of Awadh which are not found elsewhere. The minute and detailed account of a number of events suggest that the author was an eye-witness to all these.

It deals with the invasion of Nadir Shah on India and propounds the theory that Nizam-ul-mulk invited Nadir Shah to invade India.
550. Himmat Bahadur Birdavli (Ed. Bhagwandin, Varanasi, n.y.) of Pagyakar. The author was born at Sagar in 1754 and served under Raghunath Roy, ruler of Sagar; Himmat Bahadur; Daulat Rao Sindhia; Partap Singh, Raja of Jaipur; and Bhim Singh, Raja of Jodhpur. He wrote a number of works, like Sawai Jai Singh Virdavli; Jagat Vinod, Ali Jah Parkash etc., all of which are of great Historical value; but, as far as I know, none of these have so far come to light. The present work deals with a battle fought by Himmat Bahadur of which the author was an eye-witness and is highly eulogistic.
551. Rasa Bhagwant Singh (Ed. Brij Ratan Das, Kashi Nagri Pracharini Patrika, Vol. V, 1981 V.S.) of Sadanand. Despite its eulogistic treatment, its details and dates are correct and it is not only very useful for the battle of Saadat Khan with Bhagwant Singh but also adds new facts about Saadat Khan not found elsewhere.
552. Selections from Peshwa Daftar (New Series, Hindi sources) - Ed. Raghubir Sinh (Bombay, 1979).
553. Sujan Charitra (Benares, 1980 V.S.) of Sudan. he was an eyewitness to the battles his master Surajmal Jat fought for Safdar Jang. His account is confirmed and corroborated by other contemporary sources but requires to be handled with care as it is a panegyric of his patron.

(a) Contemporary Akhbarats

The news items in these are based on the reports sent to them by their own correspondents or other informers; but, for want of means of communications and such other bottlenecks, these often mix rumours and unverified information with facts. Some of these also aim at giving the effect of story telling and sensalisation and hence are required to be dealt with caution. Many of these now appear to have perished and only extracts or references to these are available in some modern works.

745. Akhabarat, 1181-1213 H (ed. Yusuf Hussain, Hyderabad, 1955). These are some important News-letters pertaining to Awadh.
746. (a+b) Amad Namah of Allama Fazi-i-Imam (a. Text Vide Journal of the Pakistan Historical Society, Vol. III, Part I, pp. 64-80). (b) Eng. tr. Vol. III, Part IV, pp 273-86). It gives short biographical sketches of the Ulema of Awadh. The sketches are very brief and give very little information.
747. Anwarur Rehman Letanwirul Jinan of Shah Abdur Rehman (Ed. Molvi Nurullah, Lucknow, 1270H).
748. Bahr-i-Hidayat of Wajid Ali Shah (Lucknow, 1267h). It contains the rulings of the Chief Mujtahid of Lucknow on the Questions placed before him by Wajid Ali Shah as Heir-Apparent. (See Cole, 302).
749. Bayaz-i-Masail of Musharraf Ali Khan, 3 Vols. (Lucknow, 1251 H). It throws light on the socio-religious life of Lucknow.
750. Daftar-i-Diwani-wa-Mal-wa-Mulki Sarkar-i-Aali (Hyderabad, 1357 H). It contains some important news-letters relating to the events of Awadh.
751. (a+b+c+d) Delhi Barhavin Sadi Hijri Main (a. Hyderabad, n.y.) of Nawab Zu-ul-Qadar Dargah Quli Khan. (b) ed. N.H. Ansari as 'Muraqqa-i-Dilli' (Delhi, 1981). (c) Eng. tr. Chander Shekhar & S. Mitra as 'Muraqqa-e-Delhi : The Mugal Capital in Muhammad Shah's time (Delhi, 1989). (d) Hindi tr. M. Umar as 'Muhammad Shah Rangele Ki Dilli (Aligarh, 1970). The author came to Delhi and stayed there from 1151-1154 H (1738-1741). He writes what he saw. It is useful for those poets who later migrated to Lucknow.
752. Dasturul Insha, also called Insha-i-Faiq (Kanpur, 1292 H) of Muhammad Faiq. He wrote it at the command of Nawab Qasim Ali Khan, son of Nawab Salar Jang, who was a brother of Bahu Begam. It contains a number of contemporary documents, which throw light on the Nawabi of Asaf-ud-daulah and Saadat Ali.
753. Faiz-i-Mir (Ed. Syed Masud Hasan Rizvi Adib, Lucknow, n.y.) of Mir Taqi Mir. He wrote it for the teaching of his son. Despite the tall claim of Mir that he was an eye-witness of the stories it contains, these are unbelievable and have no historical value. However, these give valuable information about Mir and his family.

754. Faramin-i-Salatin (Delhi, 1926) of Bashiruddin. It is a collection of some important Farmans of the rulers of Delhi and petitions sent to them, including from Awadh.
755. Haft-Qulzum (Lucknow, n.y.) of Ghaziuddin Haidar. 7 Vols. It is a Persian Dictionary.
756. Kanz-ul-Ansab (Bombay, 1300 H) of Syed Ata Hussain Chishti. It has some useful informations about Shah Alam-II and Shuja-ud-daulah.
757. Kashf-ul-Matwari (ed. Syed Muhammad Amjad Ali, Lucknow, 1318 H) of Shah Turab Ali. It contains letters exchanged between Shah Muhammad Kazim Qalandar (1158-1221 H = 1745-1806) and Munshi Faiz Bakhsh, author of Tarikh-i-Farah Bakhsh, which throw light on the contemporary History.
758. Khazanah-i-Amrah (Kanpur, 1871) of Ghulam Ali Azad Bilgrami.
759. (a+b) Kitab Dastur-i-Malguzari of Khwaja Yasin (Persian Text & English tr. S. Hasan Mahmud, New Delhi, 2000).
760. (a+b) Lataif-us-Saadat (a. British Museum MS OR 2021 P 16. 65) of syed Inshaullah Khan. Ed. Amna Khatoon (Mysore, 1955 - b. It also contains its Urdu translation. It is a collection of the witty sayings of Saadat Ali, the author and other contemporaries and throws invaluable light on Saadat Ali and his times.
761. Maadanul Fawaid or Ruqaat-i-Mirza Qateel (Kanpur, 1265 H). It is a collection of Persian letters of the famous Persian poet, Mirza Muhammad Hasan Qateel to his pupil, Khwaja Imamuddin alias Khwaja Imami, who collected these in the present form in 1232 H (1816-17). It is very useful for various aspects of the History of Awadh.
762. (a+b+c) Maasirul Umara (a. Calcutta, 1888) of Shah Nawaz Khan Samsamuddaulah. 3 vols. (b) Part Hindi tr. Brij Ratan Das (Benares, 1988 VS). (c) Eng. tr. H Beveridge & Baini Parsad (Calcutta; 1941).
763. Majmil-ut-Tawarikh Bad Az Nadiriya (ed. O Mann, Leyden, 1896) of Muhammad Amin Abul Hasan Gulistane. He was in Persia till 10 years after the death of Nadir Shah, after which he migrated to Murshidabad, where he wrote the present work. It portrays the biography of Ahmad Shah Durrani. It is useful for his invasions on northern India but is not free from inaccuracies. The author is partial and eulogistic to his correligionists. Due to the availability of far more accurate and contemporary accounts on the subject, it is not of much value.

764. Majmua Makatib Majmuadar i.e. Makatbat wa Muraslat (Poona). It is a collection of contemporary letters.
765. Mirat-ul-Alam (Lahore, 1979), 2 Vols. of M. Bakhtawar Khan.
766. (a+b+c) Makatib-i-Mirza Mazhar (a. Bombay, 1966). (b) Urdu tr. M. Umar (Patna, 1965). (c) Another Urdu tr. of 91 Letters by Khaliq Anjum as 'Mirza Mazhar Jan-i-Janan Kai Khutoot' (Delhi, 1988). It is a collection of 149 letters of Mirza Mazhar Jan-i-Janan, a famous saint poet of Delhi. These mostly pertain to his personal affairs; but also have scattered references to the contemporary events of northern India, including Awadh.
767. Malazul Kalimat (Calcutta, 1297 H) of Wajid Ali Shah. It is a dictionary.
768. (a+b) Mubahisa bain-un-nafs wa Al-Aql (Calcutta, 1291 H) of Wajid Ali Shah. It is purely on religious affairs. However, it also contains his maternal and paternal genealogies. Besides, it gives a description of his imprisonment at Calcutta and his daily routine for three consecutive years.
769. (a+b) Muntakhab-ul-Lubab (a. ASB Text) of Khafi Khan. (b) Eng. tr. S. Moinul Haq as 'History of Alamgir' (Karachi, 1975). It contains brief but accurate details about the early career of Saadat Khan.
770. Nigarnama-i-Hind of Ghulam Ali Naqvi. He wrote it during his stay at Faizabad and presented it to Col. Baillie. It deals with the Third Battle of Panipat. He claims that he wrote it after hearing the details of the battle from Rai Kashi Raj, who was an eyewitness to it; but his text completely tallies with the Persian work of Kashiraj. This work has been published by Newal Kishore press as an appendix to Imad-us-Saadat. (b) Urdu tr. Hasan Nizami as 'Panipat Kai Maidan Main Hindu Musalmano Ki Akhri Larai' (Badaun, 1945).

771. Persian Matriculation Course (Ed. Mirza Muhammad Ismail Khan, Allahabad, 1912). It contains an extract of the autobiography of Shaikh Ali Hazin.
772. Persian Documents (Preserved at the National Archives of India, Delhi. Ed. P. Saran, Delhi, 1966). These are some important contemporary Persian documents. (ORs cited by me in my books are from this collection).
773. (a+b) Riyaz-us-Salatin (a. Persian Text, Calcutta, 1898). (b) Eng. tr. Molvi Abdus Salam (Calcutta, 1904; Reprinted Delhi, 1975) of Ghulam Hussain Salim. It is an account of the Muslim rulers of Bengal down to 1787-88. The work was completed in 1202 H (1787-88). Although he has mainly relied on other sources; but his own contribution to it is not wanting. It has a veiled reference to the war of Safdar Jang with the Rohillas, flight of Mir Qasim to Awadh and a useful reference on the British interference and influence in Awadh.
774. (a+b) Sarguzisht Nawab Najib-ud-daulah (a. Ed. Muhammad Abdus Salam, Aligarh, 1924). It is the Persian text of Nuruddin's Persian work, a first rate source on the life of Najib-ud-daulah, preserved, at the British Museum, London. It is particularly useful for the Durrani invasions of 1759-61 and the relations of Najib-ud-daulah and Shuja-ud-daulah. (b) Eng. tr. as 'Ahwal-i-Najib-ud-daulah' (Aligarh, 1952).
775. (a+b) Shah Waliullah Dehlvi Kai Siyasi Maktoobat (a. Ed. Khaliq Ahmad Nizami (Delhi, 1969). b. It also contains Urdu translations of all these letters). It is a collection of the letters of Shah Waliullah, a famous saint and reformer of the Eighteenth Century. These throw light on the Durrani invasions and other contemporary events.
776. Selections from Peshwa Daftar (Miscellaneous Persian Papers).
777. Shareh Nasaih-i-Akhtari (Lucknow, n.y.) of Muhammad Shafi' Rizvi.
778. Swanihat-i-Mumtaz (Ed. Molvi Habib Khan Soroosh-Omari, Madras, 1961) of Muhammad Karim Khair-ud-din Hasan. Began in 1833 and finished in 1837. It gives information about the Mughal prince Azfari and his links in Awadh after his migration to Arcot and the relations of Tipu Sultan with the rulers of Arcot.

779. Tarikh-i-Jahan Kusha-i-Nadiri (Bombay, 1309 H) of Muhammad Mehdi. Completed on 15th Rabi-I, 1240 H (7th November, 1824). Having been written by the Mir Munshi of Nadir Shah, it is a basic source for his invasion on India and the role of Saadat Khan in it.
780. (a+b) Tarikh-i-Mansuri of Syed Ali. Date of its completion is not known. It has some useful references on the Naib-Nazims of Bengal and Fort William. Extracts vide the Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, 1867, Part I, No. II, pp 85-104. (b) Eng. tr. partly in the Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, 1867, Part I, No. II, pp 85-104.
781. (a+b) Tarikh-i-Nadir Shahi, also called Nadir Namah (Tehran, 1349 H) of Muhammad Shafi Tehrani Warid. (b) Eng. tr. Sir William Jones as 'The History of the Life of Nadir Shah (London, 1773). Written in 1156 H (1743). It traces the career of Nadir Shah and also throws light on the career of Burhan-ul-Mulk Saadat Khan and the Maratha raids on northern India and their relations with Saadat Khan and Safdar Jang. A reliable work.
782. Tarikh-i-Nusratjangi (Ed. Hari Nath De and published in the Memoirs of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, II, 121-153) of Nawab Nusrat Jang. Completed in 1817 by Nawab Nusrat Jang. It was continued by his Arzbegi's son, Abdul Ghani alias Hamir Mir, who brought it down to 1843. This latter portion contains a description of the plots of Shams-ud-daulah and Wazir Ali.
783. Tarikh-i-Zafrah (Gorakhpur, 1927) of Girdhari Lal Ahgar. Written in 1185 H (1771-72). It is mainly a History of the Deccan; but has occasional references on the Mughal Emperors and the Nawabs of Awadh, which are mostly erroneous.

814. (a+b) Tazkirah-i-Khush Naveesan (a. Ed. Muhammad Hidayat Hussain, Calcutta, 1910) of Molana Ghulam Muhammad Raqim Haft Qalmi. (b) Urdu tr. Muhammad Abdul Hai Faiz (Tonk, 1994-95). The author was a learned man of his age and an expert calligraphist and physician. He migrated from Dehli to Lucknow, where he died in 1239 H (1823-24). It contains short biographical sketches of the famous calligraphists of the world, including India and Awadh. The author, being of the same discipline, was best suited for such type of work and is the only reliable and authentic source to know about the calligraphists of Delhi and Awadh, who were his contemporaries and to whom he knew personally.

C.M. Naim as 'Zikr-i-Mir : The autobiography of the Eighteenth Century Mughal poet : Mir Muhammad Taqi Mir (Oxford, 1999). It contains important facts about Shuja-ud-daulah and Asaf-ud-daulah based on the personal knowledge of the poet but needs corrections from more authentic contemporary sources.

G. Travels

Only stray references on the rural life of Awadh are available in the sources listed here. This gap is filled quite appreciably with the exception of the districts lying in Eastern U.P. by the accounts of the travellers listed below, who came in Awadh from the days of Shuja-ud-daulah down to Wajid Ali Shah. Besides it, they generally cover the socio-econo-cultural aspects of the History of Awadh. They have left behind detailed accounts on the buildings and such other edifices of Awadh. However, not having a deeper insight into the religion, society and culture of India, except Mrs. Mir Hasan Ali, their accounts need a critical study. Their treatment of the political affairs is generally faulty except when they based their narratives on enquiries from the right persons just as was done by Conolly, Forster and Valentia, or they were themselves eye-witnesses to some of the events just as Tennant, who was present in Rohilkhand and Awadh when Wazir Ali launched his armed struggle against the English at Benares on 14th January, 1799 and he writes about it from his own personal observations. Means of communications and allied subjects have also attracted their detailed attention. However, they have a tendency of freely copying from the accounts of each other without acknowledging or pointing it out and hence one often meets with the monotony of material in their pages. For example, the description of the palaces of Asaf-ud-daulah by Emma Roberts tallies word by word with that of Gladwin's who had been to Awadh before her and the accounts of Archer and Mundy tally on many points with that of Heber.

922. Fasana-i-Ajaib (Ed. Athar Parvez, Allahabad, 1969) of Rajjab Ali Beg Suroor. Began during the reign of Ghazi-ud-din Haider and finished during that of Naseer-ud-din Haider. It is a novel but reflects the contemporary life, some aspects of which have a bearing on the Nawabi period also. It also contains a hyperbolic but useful description of Lucknow.
 923. Fasana-i-Ibrat (Ed. Zaki Kakorvi, Lucknow, 1977) of Rajjab Ali Beg Suroor. A contemporary source for the last four Kings of Awadh; but also has some important references to the previous Nawabs also.

924. Ibrat-ul-Ghaflin (Vide Kulliyat-i-Sauda, Kanpur edition) of Rafi Ahmad Sauda. It throws light on the literary rivalry of Sauda and Makin and role of Mukhtar-ud-daulah, Naib of Asaf-ud-daulah in it.
925. Insha-i-Suroor (Kanpur, n.y.; ed. Mir Ahmad Ali, Lucknow, 1887) of Rajjab Ali Beg Suroor, which throws light on the contemporary History. There are literary variations in its contents in different editions, which are many apart from those listed here.
926. Irshad-i-Khaqani (Matba-i-Sultani, 1269 H) of Wajid Ali Shah. It is on 'urooz' and 'Qafiya' of the Urdu poetry.
927. Maadanul Mosiqi (Lucknow, 1925) of Hakim Muhammad Karam Imam Khan Onami. (I have not listed its Hindi tr., which is a mere selection). Written in 1272 H (1855-56). The author was an expert musician and a hereditary servant of the rulers of Awadh. It is a technical treatise on music and musical instruments; but also throws light on the famous musicians, who flourished under the Nawabi and Kingship of the rulers of Awadh.
928. Nashtar of Hasan Shah. Eng. tr. from Persian Qurratulain Hyder (New Delhi, 1994). It is the earliest novel on the courtesans of Lucknow. Read with Ruswa's Umrao Jan Ada, it throws fuller light on their lives.
929. Nazm-i-Abdu (Vide Akhbar-us-Sanadid, I, 621-5, See Infra). Not much is known about Abdu; but it is definite that he was a contemporary to Muhammad Ali Khan and Ghulam Muhammad Khan, Nawabs of Rampur. The subject matter of this short poem is the deposition of Muhammad Ali Khan, which is needed to be read with other contemporary sources on the subject.
930. Qanum-i-Islam of Jafar Sharif. Eng. tr. G.A. Herklots as 'Islam in India' (Madras, 1863).
931. Silk-i-Gauhar (Ed. Imtiaz Ali Khan Arshi; Rampur, 1948) of Insha. It is an Urdu tale by a well known contemporary poet and bears no date of its completion. Besides having a literary value, it also throws light on the socio-cultural aspects of Awadh and the author's family background.
932. (a+b+c+d) (a) Swanihat-i-Salatin-i-Awadh & (b) Qaisar-ut-

Tawarikh (Lucknow, 1879) of Kamaluddin Haidar. Its Persian version entitled (c) 'Tarikh-i-Mamlukat-i-Awadh' is preserved at CRO and a Rotograph at AMU. (d) Part Urdu text (ed) Rais Agha as 'Mustanad Tarikh-i-Awadh' (Lucknow, 1998). Except the genealogical and such other details about the Nawabs and Kings of Awadh till the early years of Saadat Ali's Nawabi, it is based merely on Imad-us-Saadat, Yadgar-i-Bahaduri and such other Persian works but thereafter he writes from his own personal knowledge. He is preposterously gossipy and often creates fictitious eye-witnesses to give weight to his assertions and hence he is required to be handled with great care and vigilance. It should also be kept in mind that he wrote both these books at the instigation of the English and his attitude is, therefore, often biased.

949. Ahwal-i-Mahabat Jang of Yusuf Ali. Eng. tr. Jadunath Sarkar Bengal Nawabs (Calcutta, 1998). It has very useful details about Safdar Jang's relations with the Bangash Afghans (99 150-152).
950. Ansari, M.A. : Administrative Documents of Mughal India (Delhi, 1984).
951. (a+b) Araish-i-Mehfil (a. Delhi, 1945) of Mir Sher Ali Jafri Afsos. Written in 1805. It is chiefly an Urdu translation of Sujān Rai's Khulasat-ut-Tawarikh (Written in 1107 H = 1695-96); but the author has added or rejected its contents as he thought proper and hence, his account of Awadh, which conforms to this rule, is quite useful. (b) I saw an Urdu Manuscript of it at Hyderabad in

- a Research Institute, which has been copied from the Manuscript of Raja Durga Parshad of Sandila; but it has only a description of the Hindu Rajas of India and nothing else.

 954. Darya-i-Latafat (Ed. Abdul Haq, Trans. Kaifi; Aurangabad, 1935) of Inshaullah Khan and Mirza Muhammad Hasan Qateel. Written in 1223 H (1808) at the command of Saadat Ali. It is primarily a book of Urdu Grammar; but also throws light on the social, economic and political conditions.
 955. Dasturul Amal of Nawab Saadat Ali Khan of Oudh (The Journal of the United Provinces Historical Society, IV, 28-90). It is an English translation of the Persian Manuscript, which was once in the possession of Sir Richard Burn, by Khan Bahadur Syed Abu Muhammad. However, it is a misnomer and there is sufficient internal evidence to show that it pertains to the reign of Ghaziuddin Haidar and has nothing to do with Saadat Ali. It was put into practice for the first time on 14th Shawwal, 1229 H (29th September, 1814; the translator wrongly has 30th September, 1819), whereas Saadat Ali had already expired on 10th July, 1814.

963. Haft Tamasha (Translated into Urdu by Muhammad Umar, Delhi, 1968) of Mirza Muhammad Hasan Qateel. Written in 1226 H (1811-12). It is the most authentic source on the social, religious and economic condition of India and Awadh in the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Centuries. Except some hearsays and exaggerations, it is based on the personal observations of the author.
964. Halat Nadir Shah Wa Muhammad Shah (Translated by William Irvine into English, Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, 1897, pp 24-62).
965. Malfoozat-i-Chishtiya-Nasirya (Bilgram, n.y.) of Syed Tahir Ali. It is an Urdu translation of the Persian work 'Hidayat-i-Fuqra' of Syed Sarfaraz Ali Shah, which throws light on some Muslim saints of Awadh and also has scattered references on the Nawabs of Awadh.
966. Newsletters of the Mughal Court (reign of Ahmad Shah 1751-52). Eng. tr. B.D. Verma (Bombay, 1949).
967. Nishan-i-Haidri (Translated by Col. W. Miles; Calcutta, 1960) of Mir Hussain Ali Khan Kirmani. It is a History of Hyder Ali and Tipu Sultan by a court chronicler.
968. Noor-ur-Rehman (Urdu tr. of a Persian work entitled Anwar-ur-Rehman of Molvi Muhammad Noorullah) by Molvi Noor-ur-Rehman. It is a collection of the sayings of a sufi, who came to Lucknow during the Nawabi of Saadat Ali and also settled here.
969. Risala al-A'tiqad of Abu Jafar Ibn Babuyah. Eng. tr. A.A.A. Fyzee as 'A Shi'ite Creed' (Calcutta, 1942).

971. Ruqaat-i-Hazin (Punjab University, Lahore MS). English tr. vide S. Khatak : Shaikh Mohammad Ali Hazin, pp. 208-17). It contains important letters relating to Shuja-ud-daulah.

972. Tarikh-i-Saadat Khan (Anon). It is an eulogistic description of Saadat Khan's career in a nut-shell; but more detailed about his role on the eve of Nadir Shah's invasion by one of his friends, who was his next door companion during the course of his sojourn at Delhi. It is not named by Hoey, who translated it as an Appendix to the 'Memoirs of Delhi' (pp 1-14); but, since it deals with Saadat Khan's career only, I have named it as such.
973. Tatimma Tarikh-i-Rohilkhand (Bareilly, 1866). It contains Urdu translations of the agreements signed between the Nawabs of Rampur and the English or the Nawabs of Awadh.
974. The Chronology of Modern Hyderabad (Translated from the Persian Manuscript preserved at A.P. State Archives, Hyderabad, 1954). It has some important dates relevant to Awadh.
975. Vaqiat-i-Durrani (Kanpur, 1292 H). Tarikh-i-Ahmad Shah Durrani of Imamuddin Hussaini was filled with inaccuracies. Abdul Karim corrected all those mistakes and wrote another History of the Durrani down to Zamaun Shah and named it 'Tarikh-i-Ahmad'. The present work is an Urdu translation of the same. However, like the work of Imamuddin, it is also not free from blemishes.

F. Turkish

976. (a+b) Insha Ka Turki Roznamcha (Delhi, 1980 of Insha Ullah Khan. It is an Urdu translation of a fragment of the Turkish Diary of the poet from 12th July to 18th August, 1808 preserved at the Raza Library, Rampur, and is very invaluable for the Nawabi of Saadat Ali Khan. He was almost a daily visitor to the court of that Nawab and faithfully records what he saw there.

B. Hindi

1142. Vamsbhaskar (Jodhpur, n.y.) of Surajmal Charan of Bundi. Written in 1840. Although it is a History of Rajputana but it also adds facts about the Mughal Emperors and the Nawabs and Kings of Awadh. It is chiefly based on traditions and semihistorical compositions of the bards and is highly erroneous.

C. Persian

1143. Diwan-i-Viqar (Kanpur, 1269 H).
1144. Guldasta-i-Mohabbat (Lucknow, 1824) of Muhammad Sadiq Akhtar. It is a court flatterer's account of the visit of Lord Hastings to Lucknow.
1145. Insha-i-Rahat-i-Rooh (Lucknow, 1287 H) of Munshi Kunj Behari.
1146. Khazinat-ul-Asfiya of Ghulam Sarwar (Lucknow, 1873).
1147. Life Sketch of Ghalib Jang (Lucknow, 1855). Anon. It is part in verse and part in prose and deals with the life of Darshan Singh, an important noble at the court of the later Nawabs and Kings of Awadh. It is very useful.
1148. Lucknow Almanack for the year 1849 of Kamaluddin Haider (Lucknow, 1849).
1149. Mahamid-i-Haidri (Lucknow, 1823) of Muhammad Sadiq Akhtar.

It contains merely the eulogistic praise of Ghaziuddin Haider and nothing else.

1150. Malik Akhtar (Calcutta, 1296 H) of Wajid Ali Shah. Besides the poetical compositions it contains a number of instructions for different officials under him.
1151. Miftah-ut-Tawarikh (Kanpur, 1867) of Thomas William Beale. It is important for the chronograms of various rulers, nobles and important persons of India including Awadh but needs corrections at different places.
1152. Mujahidat-ul-Ayliya (Lucknow, n.y.) of Shah Turab Ali Qalandar. A contemporary account of the prominent Muslim saints. It gives the ordeals they followed.
1153. (a + b) Najo (a. Calcutta, 1286). Written in 1285 H. It is a collection of the songs of Wajid Ali Shah and others.
1154. Nama-i-Akhtari (?) of Wajid Ali Shah.
1155. Suratnamah-i-Sultan-i-Alam (Published in 1851) of Syed Imam Ashraf.
1156. Tuzuk-i-Shahi (Lucknow, 1854) of Syed Imam Ashraf.

D. Urdu

1157. Ayinah-i-Awadh (Kanpur, 1869) of Syed Muhammad Abul Hasan Shah. It has some useful references on the policy of the Nawabs and Kings of Awadh in respect of land grants, religious conditions and sketches of the Muslim saints and nobles.
1158. Badshahnama of Sadr-i-Mahal (Calcutta, 1288 H).
1159. (a+b) Bani (a. Calcutta, 1878) of Wajid Ali Shah. (b) Hindi tr. Roshen Taqi and Dr. Krishna Mohan Saxena (Lucknow, 1987)- Names of some of the books of Wajid Ali Shah have wrongly been translated in it (pp. 143-4). Compare with the names given by me in this Bibliography). Began in 1875 and completed in 1877. It deals with sur, tal, Rahas, Bhairanti and Naqls, Radha Manzilwalian, Sharda Manzilwalian, Sultankhanaiwalian, Khas Manzilwalian (Instructions for the men and women employed by him and his begmats) other Mamtooats, Qanoon-i-Akhtari and a list of the books written by him till he attained the age of 50 years and which were in his Library. But he had written other books also as admitted by him in this book itself. It also has Shuabdas, Lataif, description of

- artists employed by him, details of his Begmats and titles of his wives and offsprings.
1160. Charagh-i-Hidayat of Siraj-ud-din Ali Khan Arzoo. (Bombay, 1390 H).
 1161. Chanchal Naznin (Calcutta, 1297 H) of Wajid Ali Shah. A book on music and related affairs but also contains a description of the domestic difficulties of the author.
 1162. Dulhan (Calcutta, 1290 H) of Wajid Ali Shah. A book like Najo.
 1163. Hadiqa-i-Shohda (1856) of Mirza Jan. Written in 1855. It is a primary source for the affair relating to Hanumangarhi during the Kingship of Wajid Ali Shah. Some of his remarks are far-fetched and wrong.
 1164. Irshad-i-Khaqani (Lucknow, 1269 H) of Wajid Ali Shah. It contains opinion of the King on the Persian book on prosody of Mir Shamsuddin Faqir.
 1165. Jam-i-Jahan Numa Khurd (Lucknow, 1862) of Babu Shiv Parshad. It is mainly a book on Geography but also has some historical references of purely secondary nature.
 1166. Jan-i-Alam (Lahore, n.y.) of Mohana Abdul Halim Sharar. Although a first rate source on the life of Wajid Ali Shah but being the account of a court flatterer, it needs to be examined with care. Some of his utterances are unrealistic and far fetched.
 1167. Khutoot Akhri Shah-i-Awadh (Lucknow, n.y.) Ed. Abdul Rauf Ishrat.
 1168. Masnavi Alam (Lucknow, 1302 H) of Nawab Badshah Mahal.
 1169. Muntakhab-ut-Tawarikh (Lucknow, 1806) of Hakim Jawahar Lal. Most of its chapters are based mainly on other works. However, he was a resident of Lucknow and a contemporary to the last four kings of Awadh and has some useful details about them.
 1170. Nazm-i-Namwar (Calcutta, 1281 H) of Wajid Ali Shah. It contains mostly the letters to his wives in verse.
 1171. Qamar Mazmoon (Calcutta, 1281 H) of Wajid Ali Shah. It contains mostly the letters to his wives in verse.
 1172. Ruq'at-i-Begmat (1320 H) ed. Molvi Muhammad Imtiaz Ali.
 1173. Safar-e-Yusuf (Delhi, 1847) of Yusuf Khan Kamalposh. Republished as Ajaibat-i-Farang (Lucknow, 1873); reprinted by Munshi Newal Kishore at the Mission Printing Press (Lucknow, 1898). Yusuf Khan came to Lucknow in 1828 and remained in the service of Nasser-ud-din Haider till 1836.

1174. Sair-ul-Mohtashim (Javrah, 1851) of Mohtashim-ud-daulah Ghaus Muhammad Khan Bahadur Shaukat Jang. He visited Lucknow in 1850-51 and writes what he saw here. Besides other things, it is very useful for the building of Lucknow.
1175. Tarikh-i-Jadooliya (Newal Kishore Press, 1853; Agra, 1854) of Khadim Ali bin Shaikh Karam Ali Farooqi. It contains brief tabulated sketches of the Nawabs and Kings of Awadh of no independent value.
1176. Tawarikh-i-Gorakhpur (Mirzapur, 1859) of Syed Ahmad Ali Shah. His ancestors migrated to Gorakhpur in Awadh from Arrah in Bihar during the early years of the Nawabi rule and served under them. The details about his family and their exploits given by the author are not to be found elsewhere. The author was a contemporary to the rulers of Awadh from Saadat Ali to Wajid Ali Shah. He was five years old in 1805. It also gives a short History of Awadh in verse; but it is of no independent value. He dismisses Wazir Ali just in one couplet.
1177. Zia-i-Akhtar (Preserved at the Malviya Pustakalya, Aligarh) of Muhammad Hasan Rais. It also contains almost the entire 'Jawab Blue Book.'

ALLAMA SITAPURI OF NA-DIM SITAPURI

The title has no year of publication but the internal evidence suggests that it was published from Delhi in 1937. It runs into only 32 pages, including 2 pages of the title cover and last 3 pages containing a declaration of the Secretary, Majlis-i-Adab, Sitapur, to continue the task of conveying the cheap pocket editions about the prominent personalities of Sitapur to the general public and an advertisement about the 1916-edition of Urdu Akhwan-us-Safa (see infra), on a paper of very small size (11x13.3 cm).

- 3 - Na-dim Sitapuri has dedicated it to the 'Sun & Moon of the Urdu literature and old benefactor and patron of the celebrities of Sitapur, Amir-ud-daulah Saeed-ul-mulk Khan Bahadur Raja Mahmoodabad Amir Ahmad Khan Sahib Bahadur, Wali-i-Mahmoodabad, and Maharaj Kumar Muhammad Amir Haidar Khan Sahib Bahadur.

- 4 - Introduction by Molana Abid Raza Sahib B.A. (Hons.), M.A.

Brother Dr. Sayyid Na-dim Sahib Sitapuri, having the rank of a lineal Rais (Rich person, a man of distinction), carries with him all those general attributes, which were always inherent in his forefathers. He has that true feeling of patriotism in his heart, which has manifested itself in different forms on different occasions. Therefore, surcharged with the same emotions, he determined to revive the memories of those distinguished personalities of Sitapur, who had been relegated to oblivion due to the change of times and who had been forgotten by all except a few rank discerners (and) lovers of their motherland, by presenting some of the events of their lives before the general public. It was also needed during existing circumstances because it was due to the existence of these few personalities -5- that Sitapur was a living entity and even today if Sitapur has some proud it is (only due to) these a few gentlemen, who are hidden into obscurity. In short, the first booklet of this series, which is being published with the title 'Allama Sitapuri', contains a short biography of my glorious grandfather Janab Molvi Munshi Shaikh Ikram Ali Sahib-May Allah increase his station before Him. After its completion, Dr. Sahib insisted that I should write a 'review' on it. Although I excused much but no plea was tenable. A poor man's rage hurts none but himself. I had to promise (to do so) under compulsion. When I started writing (it), I did not find myself capable of doing so due to two reasons. Firstly, I was definitely brought up in the lap of that family, to whom Urdu is indebted, but

Became a student of English since childhood

When did I got an opportunity to learn Urdu

(Such lame excuses are not worthy of any Muslim. Read, my article on Dars-i-Nizami in my book "The Mughals, the English and the rulers of Awadh : A Kaleidoscopic Study" (Lucknow, 2003).

- 6 - Secondly, due to my hearty and natural relation with the hero, it was proper that some one else should have put in a review on him but the compliance of the command was essential. The readers can not refrain from paying compliments to this great research (when they will appreciate the fact) how difficult it was to collect the facts relating to Molvi Ikram Ali Sahib after a lapse of complete one century (and) when the people had forgotten him. Although not the non-appreciative World but the inhabitants of Sitapur themselves had forgotten such an illustrious personality but History had hidden him in her bosom due to his literary contributions. But, due to our misfortune, there was no History or Tazkirah (A book having short biographical sketches) which had details about the above mentioned Molvi Sahib. Different and incomplete details are found in various Histories. It was befitting only to Dr. Sahib that he wrote -7- the complete and comprehensive biography of Molvi Ikram Ali Sahib by taking the essence of those voluminous Histories after much painstaking efforts.

Allama Sitapuri

In Twelfth and Thirteen Centuries, when the foundation stone of Urdu Prose writing had been laid, History was gradually in search of the road to literature and the gardens of Urdu poetry and prose were being laid in the land of the Deccan, suddenly a political revolution changed its sides. The whitemen hailing from the countries lying Seven Seas away reached India in search of colonies and a very big trading centre was established in Eastern India on behalf of the East India Company, which also began to interfere in the politics of India besides taking economic strides within a short time and entered into political agreements by getting enough interference into the mutual affairs of the Native Powers due to the wild civil wars of the Indians and these circumstances laid the foundation of a new political order within a very short time.

-12- When the East India company had become the centre of the British Government in India towards the end of the Eighteenth Century, officers and revenue collectors were called from England for the government of this new colony but they faced a lot of difficulties due to the differences of language and culture. (To meet this eventuality) a college for promotion of literature was established in Fort William in 1780 during the Governor Generalship of Lord Wellesley (Warren Hastings - Qureshi) at Calcutta (now Kolkata) under the management of Dr. John Gilchrist at which the English officers were imparted the education of Indian languages and culture and civilization and excellent prose-writers, men of literature of the highest order and letter-writers from the length and breadth of India were assembled in this college and this college became the first nursery of Urdu language in Northern India (if we view it) from a historical angle.

-13- Mr Amman Lutf of Delhi, Mir Sher Ali Afsos, Mazhar Ali Wala, Mir Bahadur Ali Hussini, Nihal Chand Lahori of Panjab, Lallu Lal Qawi of Gujrat, Sayyid Muhammad Bakhsh Haidri, Ikram Ali of Awadh (Allama Sitapuri), Hafizuddin Ahmad, Beni Narain Jahan, Molvi Amanatullah Shaida, Capt. Thomas Roebuck, Dr. Hunter and Capt. Joseph Taylor. All these persons were the authoritative members of this first association of Urdu, who left behind the following memorable works under the patronage of the Fort Willam College.

1. Sayyid Muhammad Bakhsh Haidri wrote Araish-i-Mahfil, Tota Kahani, Deh Majlis, Gulzar-i-Danish, (and) Tarikh-i-Nadiri Date of death 1828.

2. Mir Bahadur Ali Hussaini wrote Nasr-i-Bainazir and Akhlaq-i-Hindi. (He) died in 1806.

-14-

3. Mir Amman Lutf Dehlvi published Bagh-o-Bahar, Chahar Darvesh.
4. Mir Sher Ali Afsos. His works include Bagh-i-Urdu. He died in 1809.
5. Hafizuddin Ahmad wrote Insha-i-Khird Afroz.
6. Nihal Chand Lahori translated Gul Bakawli under the name Mazhab-i-Ishq.
7. Kazim Ali Jawan wrote Barah Masa and adorned Shakuntala with the dress of Urdu.
8. Lallu Lal Qawi Gujrati wrote Lataif-i-Hindi.
9. Mazhar Ali Dila (Wala - Qureshi) wrote the tale of Madho Nal.
10. Molvi Ikram Ali (Allama Sitapuri) translated Arabic Akhwan-us-Safa into Urdu.

-15-

11. Beni Narain Jahan Wrote Tazkirat-ush-Sho'ra in 1812 and translated the tale Chahar Gulshan into Urdu.
12. Molvi Amanatullah Shaida translated Akhlaq-i-Jalali under the title Jamey-ul-Akhlaq and composed Surf wa Nahw (Grammar) in verse.
13. Capt. Joseph Taylor completed a dictionary in 1808.
14. Capt. Thomas Roebock wrote a dictionary and terms of navigation in 1811.

Apart from these works, John Gilchrist himself wrote more than a dozen books on Urdu language and (its) rules. He had great interest and love for the Eastern culture and civilization. He often put on Indian dresses and was an advocate of promoting Indian culture. Urdu language and Indian culture came nearer to the West during his days.

Such books will rarely be found in the literary contributions of the writers of the Fort William which can be imputed to the novelty and temperament of Urdu. Rather, most of these include the translations of Arabic, Persian and Hindi books because the Urdu language was mostly devoid of cultural influences during those days due to which the culture and civilization of other languages was dressed into Urdu to give it a literary shape. New proverbs and commonly understood terms which were preserved among the elites as 'national treasure' (qaumi amanat) were presented in the form of these translations.

-17- Out of the translations of this period, the translation of Molvi Ikram

Ali Sitapuri (Entitled) Akhwan-us-Safa deserves a special mention. It has been translated from Arabic Akhwan-us-Safa in 1225 J corresponding to 1810 A.D. This book had been written by famous letter-writers Abul Hasan, Abu Muhammad and Abu Salman etc., ten people of Basra, conjointly in the form of an encyclopaedia dealing with different sciences, in the third chapter of which a trial of the human beings and animals has been recorded and different animals have recorded their complaints against the finest specie on the earth (man) and their demands before the King of the Genii. Both sides filed their witnesses and it was said in the judgement that the man was the finest specie, he has preference over you so the claim of the plaintiff is justified and that of the defendants is rejected.

Molvi Ikram Ali was a resident of Sitapur Awadh. -18- His glorious ancestor Shaikh Muhammad Rais was the first Muslim pious man who came and settled in Qasba Sitapur and the Shaikh-sarai locality is the memorial of that pious man. He was a descendant of the offsprings of Hazrat Umar ibn Al-Khattab (Raz.). His grandson Shaikh Paiki, May God have Mercy on him, travelled all the way to Baghdad on foot (It is indicative of the degeneration of the family - Qureshi) and brought some relics from the mausoleum of Hazrat Abdul Qadir Jilani (Gilani - Qureshi) which were buried along with him.

The genealogical link of Ikram Ali with Shaikh Muhammad Rais, Rais Mohalla Shaikhsarai Sitapur, is through five (It is actually six - Qureshi) stages - Ikram Ali b. Ahsan Ali b Mubarak Muhiuddin b Nasrullah alias Lahol b Shaikh Paiki b. Saikh Habibullah b. Shaikh Muhammad Rais, Rais and Founder of Mohalla Shaikhsarai Sitapur. His family dignity and greatness is worth remembering in the Islamic History of Sitapur. (It is always better to call it a History of the Muslims because the basic ingredients of the Islamic History is the life lead on the basis of Kitab, Sunnat, ijma and Qayas based on the essence and guidelines laid down in the preceding three sources. No such Islamic History of the Muslims exists. - Qureshi). The family members and ancestors (of this family) were often appointed to exalted offices. (Too vague without elaboration - Qureshi).

-19- So far as sanctity and greatness are concerned, this family had a special proximity with the Awlias saints of Delhi and their first rate grandfather Hazrat Baba Farid Shakarganj was a famous and well known sufi saint. The uncle of Molvi Ikram Ali himself, Shaikh Subhan Ali, who was also his father-in-law, was a distinguished person (among the grandees) of the Emperor of Delhi and he had left behind much property after him, which was inherited by him. (Ikram Ali - Qureshi).

The education and bringing up of Ikram Ali took place in that knowledge cultivating bosom, which had dandled family grandeur and endurance. Apart from father and uncle, the literary bent of mind of the loving elder Allama Haji Turab Ali Nami Khairabadi, Let there be mercy on him, who was his brother in relation (maternal or paternal ?), became the originator of such a great revolution (in him) that it made this bright star to shine as a great luminary -20- on the horizon of literature.

Allama Turab Ali Nami, the foremost pupil of Mirza Qatil, was an unmatched learned man and an illustrious scholar (and) a great man of Qasba Khairabad, district Sitapur. He was employed in Fort William College but because no book written by him is in existence so the list of the writers of the Fort William is devoid of his name. It is written about him in the Tazkirah Shora'i-i-Dakhan :

Turab Ali name. Abbasi descent. His native place is Khairabad. After gaining majority, he finished the books of Ma'qool (rational sciences) and Manqool (religious sciences) at the feet of Molana Abdul Wahid and Molvi Ghulam Imam and learnt the art of composing poetry at the feet of Mirza Qateel. He went to Ccutta in search of employment after finishing his education. He came to Madras after heartily travelling in Iran, Iraq and Ajam (Countires other than Arabia proper of the old days) in the company of the British officers and -21- became a teacher in the Madarsa (seminary) of the Company. (He) went to Harmain Sharifain (Mecca) for pilgrimage after some time. He departed for paradise at the place Pattan (Sharif = noble - so called due to being a resting place of a saint) in 1241 H (1825-26 Qureshi). He was a learned man, and accomplished person and a scholar of all sorts of learning in vogue. He was a pleasant speaker and a man of great moral character. His writings were attractive and he was a pleasing orator. (He also) evinced interest in the poetry. Whatever he composed was (always) nice and agreeable. (pp 118-119) (A Persian couplet not translated).

Ikram Ali himself has written in the Preface of Akhwan-us-Safa :
 -22- "...I came to Calcutta at the instance of....Mr. Braham Lockett.... and brother and teacher... Molvi Turab Ali and due to good fortune....the (said English officer) got me employed under the Government of the Company Bahadur and (I was) posted with him."

In short, Ikram Ali reached Fort William at the recommendation of Allama Turab Ali Nami and the patronage of Braham Lockett made him soon worthy of acceptance and getting employed in the College, (after which he) was deputed for the Urdu education of Braham Lockett. During those days translations of the (books in) Arabic, Persian and -23- Hindi were being rendered into Urdu. Molvi Ikram Ali began the correct and idiomatic Urdu translation of the Third Chapter of Arabic Akhwan-us-Safa, entitled dialogue between Man and the animals, which reached its culmination in 1810.

The chances of Ikram Ali's further promotions became wide open after finishing the task of the translation of Akhwan-us-Safa and in 1814 when Mr. John Gilchrist went to England and Mr. Braham Lockett became Incharge of Fort William College, he honoured Movli Ikram Ali with the post of the Keeper of the Office (Muhafiz-i-Daftar) of Fort William College at a suitable salary.

After remaining planted at this post for some years, he was appointed Sadr-us-Sudur (Chief Justice) of the City of Calcutta and this post was considered as equivalent to Judgeship during those days.

-24- Ikram Ali Continued to visit his native place Sitapur during those days from time to time and often took part in the affairs of the well-being of the people. He, therefore, started building a mosque near his house but it had not yet been completed that he was appointed Mufti of Ajmer and went there. Since the light of the Unity of God was manifest in his heart so he made the grooming at the mausoleum of Hazrat Khwaja Gharib Nawaz his habit and practice and began to remain engrossed in devotion and prayers to God.

When the Jama Masjid got completed in 1837, he was at Ajmer. Therefore, the following inscription is engraved at the main gate of the mosque :

"Date of building the mosque 1253 H. Builder of mosque : Molvi Hakim Shaikh Ikram Ali Farooqi Faridi Hanafi Qadri, Rais Sitapur, Mohalla -25- Shaikhsarai Mufti Ajmer Sharif."

Three graves of Shaikh Paiki and his ancestors are built in a corner enclosure to the north of this Jama Masjid, at which urs is conducted every year.

Molvi Ikram Ali died at Ajmer Sharif during the same year i.e. 1837 A.D., corresponding to 1253 H, when this mosque got completed and was buried there itself in the mausoleum of Hazrat Khwaja. A stunning event is related about his death. It is reputed that the day Ikram Ali died at Ajmer, the northern minaret of the Jama Masjid suddenly fell down on the same day and at the same time, which caused restlessness and embarrassment in the family. Therefore, (when) the shocking news of the death of Ikram Ali reached (Sitapur) after 10-15 days from Ajmer and -26- the day and the time were taken into consideration, the day and time of his death and that of the falling of the minaret were found to be the same. Thereafter, the said minaret was got reconstructed by his...son Akbar Ali.

Out of the contemporaries of Molvi Ikram Ali, Sayyid Abdullah Rizvi was a great talented elder during those days in Sitapur, who was contemporary to Wali Dakhni. One of his couplets is very famous.

Tujh Bhawan Kai Pas yoon hai Chashm-i-Mast
Jaisay Maikhana Kinar-i-Aab-i-Joo
You have intoxicating eyes near your eye-brows
As if the liquor shop was on the bank of a stream

In short, the Urdu translation of Akhwan-us-Safa was first of all published after its completion in Urdu type and published by the Fort William (College) because the Stone Printing Presses were then less in vogue.

-27- Dr. F. Dieterci published the translation of Akhwan-us-Safa in English for the first time in Europe in 1865-1879, which became very popular. When the Civil Service Course was prepared after this translation, Akhwan-us-Safa was included in the syllabus of I.C.S.

Akhwan-us-Safa was published in a Stone Printing press for the first time in 1849, corresponding to 1265 H, by Matba-i-Muhammadi, Takia Shah Fasih, Lucknow. Historically speaking, this Urdu Akhwan-us-Safa is the first edition which has been published by a Litho Press. I had purchased this book many years ago at Lucknow, which is preserved with me.

The second edition of a Stone Printing Press -28- was published in 1861 by Late Munshi Newal Kishore, which has been referred by Molvi Muhammad Yahiya Tanha B.A. in Sirat-ul-Musannafin. This book is available with one of his friends.

Out of the English translations, (another English) translation of Akhwan-us-Safa was done by Mr. John Plutts under the title 'Brothers of Purity', which was published by London Printing Works, Lahore, in November, 1909. I have got this edition.

Keeping in view the rarity of Akhwan-us-Safa, its last edition was published in 1916 by the famous grandson of Ikram Ali, Late Munshi Hasan Raza Sahib Adib, Sitapuri, editor of Risala Tehzeeb. This is a very successful edition from the angle of devoidness of the printing errors -29- and nicety. It includes a profound and comprehensive introduction written by Hazrat Adib but there is definitely the lack of the autobiography of the translator, towards which, it appears, Hazrat Adib paid no heed otherwise the fortunate and better manner in which this important job had been completed, it would have remained a memorable work till eternity.
